If you're into catastrophe scenarios, David Booth has a corker for you. It just may be that all that Planet-X stuff last year wasn't total baloney. David has the credentials, and his story is the key to a lot of puzzles. It makes a complete, awful picture out of a bunch of seemingly unrelated data.

Like predictions by Nostradamus 500 years ago of a pole change which would wipe out 97% of humanity shortly after the millennium, Edgar Cayce, the Sleeping Prophet, around 80 years ago, Ed Dames (Major Doom), Gordon Michael Scallion, and other prophets with track records more recently.

Is there a connection between our military being spread out all around the world instead of here at home, endless rumors of vast underground government construction, the secrecy about the Third Revelation of Fatima, and so on through a long list?

Okay, what's my role in all this? Well, Dave will tell you how bad things look like they're going to get, leaving it up to me to offer some advice on things you can do if you think he may be right.

Number one if you haven't given a lot of thought to your health before, it's time to wise the hell up. The fact is that you can get yourself into robust health, ready to deal with whatever comes, if you'll just stop your habitual poisoning of your body.

My Secret Guide to Health goes into the gory details of the poisons we're used to inflicting on our immune systems. Like? Like cooked food, sugar, milk, coffee, alcohol, nicotine, dental amalgam, root canals, fluorides and chlorine in your water, nearby power lines, electric blankets, cell phones, a lack of needed minerals, stress, not enough sleep, and so on. As I say, the details are in my book, and I've backed em up.

Number two if you and your family are going to survive hurricane winds and monster waves roaring all around the world, you're going to have to be underground. Start digging. Dave has a bunker buried next to his house, all set for an extended family refuge.

When things calm down you're going to want an amateur radio transceiver and a power supply for it like a bicycle-powered generator.

You'll want enough food to last until more can be grown. With no stores, no roads, no power, no regular radio or TV, no telephone, and so on, you'll be on your own. Make that a hand saw, not a power saw. Do we have weeks or months to get ready? Precognition is never certain on dates, so no one knows.

Preface to this Edition xiv

There are a number of reasons that you are reading this book today, the one I'm going to choose is because you are meant to. And what I mean by this is simply that the paths each of us walks in this life often intersect, like ours has today.

And as we stand here together at one of these crossroads I've got a story to tell you about this world we live in today, how we came to be, and where we're heading, or more accurately, what is going to be happening to us.

As you read this book I'd like for you to keep in mind that I'm not trying to scare you but rather to put forth to you information you've already heard about, but put together in a way that is different then you've previously been exposed to. Another way to put this is that you're going to be experiencing in these words a different perspective, a different way of looking at information.

If there's anything that we have an overabundance of during this early part of the 21st Century it is information. In the 1880's an average American had the equivalent of a typical Sunday's edition of the New York Times worth of information available to them, for their entire lives. Today you have a million more times worth of information available to you just by turning on your computer and accessing the Internet. Yet who would be more able to survive a disaster? Who would be able to feed themselves and their families if all the stores were gone? Who would be able to keep themselves and their families warm in the winter with nothing available to them but an ax? Who would be able to survive just one year totally on their own?

The answers to those questions are simple, and at the same time sad. Not just here in the United States, but all over the world, people are not prepared to survive, indeed have very little knowledge about what they could/would do if the worst happened. And to keep from facing this reality they instead fall back upon the knowledge that in the event of a disaster their government would take care of them. But what if there wasn't a government? It's not a thought most people would even allow themselves to think. But, you're not one of those people are you? That's why we're having this conversation, why you've stopped here at the corner of Know and Don't Know to listen to my story.

Now the story I'm going to tell you is just that, a story. And a story is simply this, an account of an incident or of a series of incidents, either true or invented. You'll listen to mine and then you'll have to decide what to believe, what is truth, what is not. I want you to keep in mind too that while you're listening to my story you're not reading a scientific research paper or a novel like War and Peace. It's not my goal, or mission to convince you of anything, even what I believe to be the truth. Neither is it my goal to become an instant professor of ancient history, there are more than enough of them out there with books of their own for you to read and decide upon.

My only goal here is tell you a good story and that by the time we're finished and you continue along your path we'll leave as friends and that you'll be a little more prepared for whatever you may meet, or face, in the future along the way. If that happens then I'll be happy in knowing you, and more importantly I'll know that you are a fellow survivor and that in a better world, in a better time, we'll perhaps meet again and reminisce about these times and when we first met.

For those of you who are looking for the ultimate truth, fully documented, referenced, and without error, the 'ultimate' book of truth....keep looking, stop reading now, this isn't the book for you! Be prepared also to meet a number of different ideas, and some old ideas looked at in a different way. For the rest of you, sit back, relax, open your minds, and let's begin!

ONCE UPON A TIME IN A LAND CALLED AMERICA.....

The Multiverse: Once Upon A Time

I can never forget being young and reading stories that began with the words, "Once Upon A Time"! With those four simple words I knew that I was about to be transported into a wondrous world of invention and creativity, though as a child I couldn't express my feelings with such big words. But what I couldn't express in words I more than made up for in feelings and emotions. Heroes and villains were readily identified and understood. The trials and tribulations of the characters were not just words on a page; they were feelings from my heart. When characters cried, I cried too. When the characters were afraid, so was I.

Fairy tales are those stories we remember with a fondness that we likewise reserve for old memories of family and friends, of a time when this world was a much simpler place, less complicated, and more secure.

As I began getting older my education began, to school I went. And the books I began having to read no longer began with "Once upon a time...", they began with Facts! Something known to have happened, to be true or exist. And what I began to learn was astounding! My parents had lied, a white lie of course, and there was no Santa Claus. My Sunday school teacher had lied and instead of God making us I found out we came from monkeys. My brother had lied to me and the church steeple in our town that I had believed was the tallest in the world just wasn't true.

And like my fellow students I began to see a certain truth of life, that people will lie to us to get us to believe some really stupid things, including our parents. So, I began my education still respecting my parents but never wholly trusting them with truth and facts, that particular trust I reserved for my teachers. And teachers knew everything!

Well, imagine my disappointment in getting older still and learning that teachers not only don't know everything, but even if they did they wouldn't be able to tell their students. And every high-school student who ever walked the 'halls' from class to class knows that a game is being played with us, the students, being the pawns pushed around on the chess board of life. Far from being places of education, schools as we've known them in our lifetime are more for indoctrination... which means to fill a person's mind with certain ideals or beliefs not natural to them. And the first thing to go is the magic and mystery of any story that begins with, Once Upon A Time! Why? Because they are the four most dangerous words in the world, that's why!

I want you to understand something very important now, something which you instinctively have known since you first set foot in the first school you had to go to. Schools are NOT for educating, they are for INDOCTRINATION! Their purpose is not for the education of children but rather they are an invention of man's for the sole purpose of producing robots, working robots.

The early days of the Industrial Revolution saw the large textile plants of England struggling to survive because they couldn't keep workers, no matter how much they paid them. The problem was that human beings were not meant to do that type of work. Human beings are first and foremost social creatures, we live and breathe to be a part of our families, our tribes, our neighborhoods, our countries, our societies. We had lived centuries by the sun, by the moon, by the stars. Knowing without clocks and calendars when to plant, when to harvest, how to live with nature, not against it. We knew as a species how to cooperate with our environment, we never had thoughts about destroying it.

Safety and security were not measured by the accumulation of money and property but rather by how we were able to provide food and shelter for our children and tribes. There were no laws needed to ensure that children were protected and senior citizens provided for, they were the two most looked after groups of every tribe, regardless of skin color, regardless of geography. It was simply the way things were.

But times were indeed changing and a New Man was needed, a new type of man, an Industrial man! But this type of man isn't born, he has to be created! "And they said. Let There Be Industrial Man!" So schools were created, and it was so.

Have you ever thought about what exactly a school is? What exactly it teaches children? Your children? Well, it's simple. In order to create the industrial man you had to take children and first of all destroy their confidence in their parents and/or family structure. You then had to destroy their belief system in anything other than the absolute authority of the school and its teachers. So once the schools destroyed the family and God they were then free to fill in the blanks with anything they so chose.

And what did they 'fill in'? Well, for starters they took children and put them in an environment where they were forbidden to talk to each other, even though they were sitting right next to each other. This is not normal for adults, let alone children. It is against our natural human instincts. Think of the last time you had a spontaneous experience where you were forced into interacting with your fellow humans, like in a traffic jam when everything's stopped and everybody gets out of their cars.

What happens? People, strangers even, begin to strike up conversations. What about after a disaster strikes, people come together and strike up conversations with each other. Why? As a species we're information gatherers, it is imperative to our survival and is an actual part of our DNA. As free thinkers our specie's survival is dependent upon information and without it we'd die. Think about it, how many of you instinctively know how to plant seeds? How to start fires? How to build shelters? You can readily see how dependent we, as a species, are on information from other humans.

Being natural humans however does not make us Industrial men. To be an industrial man you have to be able to be around your fellow humans and not talk. You have to be able to suppress your bodily functions until you have 'permission' to do what your body insists need to be done. You have to suppress your intelligence and common sense and learn to obey, without question, your teacher, boss, supervisor, manager. You have to cease being human, period.

So, as I got older and away from the influence of teachers I became a heretic, which is one who holds beliefs contrary to those accepted by the majority of others. But I've noticed something different happening over the last 25 years, there are more like me waking up everyday, and maybe you're one too.

And by waking up I mean that you are begging to think for yourself, not believe those in authority just because they say something is so, and are now searching for answers to all the questions you've had stored up in you since childhood. You are looking at your life in a new way, from a new perspective, and wondering why you have so much in money and property yet happiness, contentment, and love seem more elusive than ever.

You are also feeling something so 'gut' level as to be primordial. A sense that a great change is about to occur yet at the same time not knowing where those feelings are coming from or what to even do about them. You know you are being lied to, have been lied to your whole life, and expect to be lied to in the future. You are also aware that your education has prepared you for nothing that is important in life, especially survival, yet your senses keep telling you to 'do something', your very survival depends on it. But what!

Since you're listening to my story you're going to have to hear my answers, or you can just close this book now and find another way to answer the many questions that are inside of you. To go on however, I must warn you about something very important; information from any source, including this book, becomes a part of whom and what you are. Wise words indeed were spoken by Jesus when he said that words are like mustard seeds. They are the tiniest seeds yet grow into the largest herb. In other words, words are one of the most important mediums for the exchange of information for humans, and none can or should ever be taken lightly.

From new research coming out of Russia we have some astounding evidence of this, and I'll be as brief as I can.

Human DNA can be likened to a biological Internet and superior in many aspects to the artificial one. The latest Russian scientific research directly or indirectly explains phenomena such as clairvoyance, intuition, spontaneous and remote acts of healing, self healing, affirmation techniques, unusual light/auras around people (namely spiritual masters), the mind's influence on weather patterns and much more.

In addition, there is evidence for a whole new type of medicine in which DNA can be influenced and reprogrammed by words and frequencies WITHOUT cutting out and replacing single genes.

It appears that only 10% of our DNA is being used for building proteins.. It is this subset of DNA that is of interest to western researchers and is being examined and categorized. The other 90% are considered "junk DNA". The Russian researchers, however, convinced that nature was not dumb, joined linguists and geneticists in a venture to explore those 90% of "junk DNA".

Their results, findings and conclusions are simply revolutionary! According to them, our DNA is not only responsible for the construction of our body but also serves as data storage and in communication. The Russian linguists found that the genetic code, especially in the apparently useless 90%, follows the same rules as all our human languages. To this end they compared the rules of syntax (the way in which words are put together to form phrases and sentences), semantics (the study of meaning in language forms) and the basic rules of grammar.

They found that the alkalines of our DNA follow a regular grammar and do have set rules just like our languages. So human languages did not appear coincidentally but are a reflection of our inherent DNA,

The Russian biophysicist and molecular biologist Pjotr Garjajev and his colleagues also explored the vibrational behavior of the DNA.

The bottom line was:

"Living chromosomes function just like solitonic/holographic computers using the endogenous DNA laser radiation." This means that they managed, for example, to modulate certain frequency patterns onto a laser ray and with it influenced the DNA frequency and thus the genetic information itself. Since the basic structure of DNA-alkaline pairs and of language (as explained earlier) are of the same structure, no DNA decoding is necessary.

One can simply use words and sentences of the human language! Remember the mustard seeds Jesus talked about?

This, too, was experimentally proven!

Living DNA substance (in living tissue, not in vitro) will always react to language-modulated laser rays and even to radio waves, if the proper frequencies are being used. This-finally and scientifically explains why affirmations, autogenous training, hypnosis and the like can have such strong effects on humans and their bodies. It is entirely normal and natural for our DNA to react to language.

While western researchers cut single genes from the DNA strands and insert them elsewhere, the Russians enthusiastically worked on devices that can influence the cellular metabolism through suitable modulated radio and light frequencies and thus: repair genetic defects.

Garjajeva's research group succeeded in proving that with this method, chromosomes, damaged by x-rays for example, can be repaired. They even captured information patterns of a particular DNA and transmitted it onto another, thus reprogramming cells to another genome. So they successfully transformed, for example, frog embryos to salamander embryos simply by transmitting the DNA information patterns!

This way the entire information was transmitted without any of the side effects or disharmonies encountered when cutting out and re-introducing single genes from the DNA. This represents an unbelievable, world-transforming revolution and sensation! All this by simply applying vibration and language instead of the archaic cutting-out procedure! This experiment points to the immense power of wave genetics, which obviously has a greater influence on the formation of organisms than the biochemical processes of alkaline sequences.

Esoteric and spiritual teachers have known for ages that our body is programmable by language, words and thought. This now appears to have been scientifically proven and explained. Of course the frequency has to be correct. And this is why not everybody is equally successful or can always do it with the same strength. The individual person must work on the inner processes and maturity in order to establish a conscious communication with the DNA. The Russian researchers work on a method that is not dependent on these factors but will ALWAYS work, provided one uses the correct frequency.

But the higher developed an individual's consciousness is, the less need is there for any type of device! One can achieve these results by oneself, and science will finally stop laughing at such ideas and will confirm and explain the results. And it doesn't end there. The Russian scientists also found out that our DNA can cause disturbing patterns in the vacuum, thus producing magnetized wormholes! Wormholes are the microscopic equivalents of the so-called Einstein-Rosen bridges in the vicinity of black holes (left by burned-out stars).

These are tunnel connections between entirely different areas in the universe through which information can be transmitted outside of space and time. The DNA attracts these bits of information and passes them on to our consciousness. This process of hyper-communication is most effective in a state of relaxation. Stress, worries or a hyperactive intellect prevent successful hyper-communication, or the information will be totally distorted and useless.

In nature, hyper-communication has been successfully applied for millions of years. The organized flow of life in insect colonies proves this dramatically. Modern man knows it only on a much more subtle level as "intuition". But we, too, can regain full use of it.

An example from Nature: When a queen ant is spatially separated from her colony, building still continues fervently and according to plan. If the queen is killed, however, all work in the colony stops. No ant knows what to do. Apparently the queen sends the "building plans" also from far away via the group consciousness of her subjects. She can be as far away as she wants, as long as she is alive. In man, hyper-communication is most often encountered when one suddenly gains access to information that is outside one's knowledge base. Such hyper-communication is then experienced as inspiration or intuition. The Italian composer Giuseppe Tartini for instance dreamt one night that a devil sat at his bedside playing the violin. The next morning Tartini was able to note down the piece exactly from memory, he called it the Devil's Trill Sonata.

For years, a 42-year old male nurse dreamt of a situation in which he was hooked up to a kind of knowledge CD-ROM. Verifiable knowledge from all imaginable fields was then transmitted to him that he was able to recall in the morning. There was such a flood of information that it seemed a whole encyclopedia was transmitted at night. The majorities of facts were outside his personal knowledge base and reached technical details about which he knew absolutely nothing.

When hyper-communication occurs, one can observe in the DNA as well as in the human being special phenomena. The Russian scientists irradiated DNA samples with laser light. On screen a typical wave pattern was formed. When they removed the DNA sample, the wave pattern did not disappear, it remained. Many control experiments showed that the pattern still came from the removed sample, whose energy field apparently remained by itself. This effect is now called phantom DNA effect.

It is surmised that energy from outside of space and time still flows through the activated wormholes after the DNA was removed. The side effect encountered most often in hyper-communication, also in human beings, are inexplicable electromagnetic fields in the vicinity of the persons concerned.

Electronic devices like CD players and the like can be irritated and cease to function for hours. When the electromagnetic field slowly dissipates, the devices function normally again. Many healers and psychics know this effect from their work. The better the atmosphere and the energy, the more frustrating it is that the recording device stops functioning exactly at that moment. Repeated switching on and off after the session does not restore function, but next morning all is back to normal. Perhaps this is reassuring to read for many, as it has nothing to do with them being technically inept; it means they are good at hyper-communication.

The researchers also quote sources presuming that in earlier times humanity had been, just like the animals, very strongly connected to the group consciousness and acted as a group. To develop and experience individuality we humans, however, had to forget hyper-communication almost completely. Now that we are fairly stable in our individual consciousness, we can create a new form of group consciousness, namely one in which we attain access to all information via our DNA without being forced or remotely controlled about what to do with that information. We now know that, just as on the Internet, our DNA can feed its proper data into the network, can call up data from the network and can establish contact with other participants in the network.

Remote healing, telepathy or "remote sensing" about the state of relatives etc. can thus be explained. Some animals also know from afar when their owners plan to return home. That can be freshly interpreted and explained via the concepts of group consciousness and hyper-communication. Any collective consciousness cannot be sensibly used over any period of time without a distinctive individuality. Otherwise we would reverse to a primitive herd instinct that is easily manipulated.

Hyper-communication in the new millennium means something quite different: Researchers think that if humans with full individuality would regain group consciousness, they would have a god-like power to create, alter and shape things on Earth! AND humanity is collectively moving toward such a group consciousness of the new kind.

Fifty percent of today's children will be problem children as soon as they go to school. The system lumps everyone together and demands adjustment. But the individuality of today's children is so strong that they refuse this adjustment and the giving up of their idiosyncrasies in the most diverse ways. At the same time more and more clairvoyant children are born. Something in those children is striving more and more towards the group consciousness of the new kind, and it will no longer be suppressed.

As a rule, weather, for example, is rather difficult to influence by a single individual. But it may be influenced by a group consciousness (nothing new to some tribes doing it in their rain dances). Weather is strongly influenced by Earth resonance frequencies, the so-called Schumann frequencies. But those same frequencies are also produced in our brains, and when many people synchronize their thinking or individuals focus their thoughts in a laser-like fashion, then it is, scientifically speaking, not at all surprising if they can thus influence weather.

Researchers in group consciousness have formulated the theory of Type I civilizations. A humanity that developed a group consciousness of the new kind would have neither environmental problems nor scarcity of energy. For if it were to use its mental power as a unified civilization, it would have control of the energies of its home planet as a natural consequence. A theoretical Type II civilization would even be able to control all energies of their home galaxy.

When a great number of people get together very closely, potentials of violence also dissolve. It looks as if here, too, a kind of humanitarian consciousness of all humanity is created. At the Love Parade, for example, where every year about one million young people congregate, there have never been any brutal riots, as have occurred, for instance, at sporting events. The name of the event alone is not seen as the cause here. The result of an analysis indicated rather that the number of people was TOO GREAT to allow a tipping over to violence.

To come back to the DNA: It apparently is also an organic superconductor that can work at normal body temperature. Artificial superconductors require extremely low temperatures of between -200 and -140°C to function.

As researchers recently learned, all superconductors are able to store light and thus information. This is a further explanation of how the DNA can store information. There is another phenomenon linked to DNA and wormholes. Normally, these super-small wormholes are highly unstable and are maintained only for the tiniest fractions of a second. Under certain conditions stable wormholes can organize themselves which then form distinctive vacuum domains in which, for example, gravity can transform into electricity. Vacuum domains are self-radiant balls of ionized gas that contain considerable amounts of energy.

There are regions in Russia where such radiant balls appear very often. Following the ensuing confusion, the Russians started massive research programs leading finally to some of the discoveries mentioned above. Many people know vacuum domains as shiny balls in the sky. The attentive look at them in wonder and ask themselves, what they could be?

Now the Russians found in the regions where vacuum domains appear often, that sometimes fly as balls of light from the ground upwards into the sky, that these balls can be guided by thought. One has found out since, that vacuum domains emit waves of low frequency as they are also produced in our brains. And because of this similarity of waves they are able to react to our thoughts.

To run excitedly into one that is on ground level might not be such a great idea, because those balls of light can contain immense energies and are able to mutate our genes. They can, they don't necessarily have to, one has to say. Many spiritual teachers also produce such visible balls or columns of light in deep meditation or during energy work, which trigger decidedly pleasant feelings and do not cause any harm. Apparently this is also dependent on some inner order and on the quality and provenance of the vacuum domain.

There are some spiritual teachers (the young Englishman Ananda, for example) with whom nothing is seen at first, but when one tries to take a photograph while they sit and speak or meditate in hyper-communication, one gets only a picture of a white cloud on a chair. In some Earth healing projects such light effects also appear on photographs.

Simply put, these phenomena have to do with gravity and anti-gravity forces that are also exactly described in the book and with ever more stable wormholes and hyper-communication and thus with energies from outside our time and space structure. Earlier generations that got in contact with such hyper-communication experiences and visible vacuum domains were convinced that an angel had appeared before them. And we cannot be too sure what forms of consciousness we can access when using hyper-communication. Not having scientific proof for their actual existence (people having had such experiences do NOT all suffer from hallucinations) does not mean that there is no metaphysical background to it. We have simply made another giant step towards understanding our reality.

Official science also knows of gravity anomalies on Earth (that contribute to the formation of vacuum domains), but only of ones of below one percent. But recently gravity anomalies have been found of between three and four percent. One of these places is Rocca di Papa, south of Rome (exact location in the book "Vemetzte Intelligenz" plus several others). Round objects of all kinds, from balls to full buses, roll uphill. But the stretch in Rocca di Papa is rather short, and defying logic, skeptics still flee to the theory of optical illusion (which it cannot be, due to several features of the location).

Keep in mind too that I'm not going to try to convince you of anything, I'm just telling you my story. My story is just that too, it's a story, nothing more, nothing less. I didn't ascend a high mountain and meet with God. I didn't receive information from alien sources. This story comes from my mind, with my words, not from a spirit that is channeling through me.

My story is about my realization at a young age that in a world of billions of people there couldn't possibly be a billion gods. And if there can't be a billion different truths, what is the ONE true truth?

And a search for truth begins with first asking yourself what you believe and why you believe it, which is what I did. The asking of such profound questions also leads to more questions, a lot more questions! Questions that our standard educations have left us woefully inadequate to answer. But that didn't stop me, after all, that's what books are for aren't they?

So, off to school I went again, only this time I was the teacher and I wrote the curriculum. My goal was simple, to learn once and for all what the truth is, and to begin with I had to read, and read, and read some more! In fact I've been reading about this for over 30 years now. And I'm still not finished.

But everything has to flow in life or it stagnates, even my story, so let me tell you of some of the things I've learned so far.

First of all, this world we live in is a lot stranger than you can ever imagine. Rather than just a planet we live on, within a solar system, in a part of the universe, we live in a dimension within a Multiverse. Now, don't be surprised if you haven't heard about this on the nightly news, it's simply because the science of quantum mechanics and its discoveries are too weird for science fiction movies, let alone the popular media. Now, you're going to have to bear with me here as I explain some science stuff to you that is going to be important as this story goes along.

According to the theory of relativity, space and time are not separate things but instead different parts of a four-dimensional continuum. The space-time continuum is the theory that space and time are interconnected. Space is three-dimensional, and time is one-dimensional, so together they make up the four-dimensional space-time. Space-time is a continuum because, as far as we know, there are no missing points in space or moments in time. It's hard to picture a four-dimensional continuum since our universe is three dimensional, but you can still know how it works. Think of it as a three-dimensional coordinate system (x,y,z), with one more coordinate for time. Explaining how space-time works is extremely long and complicated so we're not going to go into a lot.

Stephen Hawking! From his book Black Holes and Baby Universes, Hawking writes that the special theory of relativity, "describes how objects move through space and time. It shows that time is not a universal quantity which exists on its own, separate from space. Rather, future and past are just directions, like up and down, left and right, forward and back, in something called space-time. You can only go in the future direction in time, but you can go at a bit of an angle to it. That is why time can pass at different rates."

Hawking goes on to say that this general theory of relativity explains that, "gravity was not just a force that operated in a fixed background of space-time. Instead gravity was a distortion of space-time, caused by the mass and energy in it. Objects like cannonballs and planets try to move on a straight line through space-time, but because space-time is curved, warped, rather than flat, their paths appear to be bent."

There has been speculation that there are more dimensions that we normally think of... most scientists will tell you there are 4 dimensions (east-west,north-south,up-down,time). But lately, there have been some physicists who have said there must be more dimensions than that.

Now the term Multiverse was invented in December, 1960, by Andy Nimmo, then vice chairman of the British Interplanetary Society, Scottish Branch, for a talk on the Everett many-worlds interpretation of quantum physics which had been published in 1957, to the Branch. This was given in February 1961, and the word with its original definition, "an apparent universe, a multiplicity of which, go to make up the whole universe" was then first used.

This was because the then dictionary definition of the word 'universe' was, "All that there is" and one cannot have "All's that there is" etymologically. 'Uni' means one, and 'multi' means many, so you can have many multiverses. The word was then both used correctly and misused in both scientific and science fiction circles over several years by those who attended this meeting and others.

In the late 1960s science fiction author Michael Moorcock interpreted the word in a novel that was read by David Deutsch. Deutsch then used the term "multiverse" in a scientific work as the totality of all possible universes throughout time, including our observable universe- the opposite of its previous definition. Other scientists, not being etymologists, then picked up and adopted the popular redefinition of the word.

Although no scientific evidence suggesting the possibility of other realms outside our own universe has been discovered yet, the concept of other universes (also described as "alternate" universes) has been proposed by theoretical scientists. In the absence of direct evidence, the case for multiple universes is related to the principle of Ockham's Razor; the existence of our universe and possibly quantum decoherence within it are most simply explained by the existence of many universes.

A multiverse of a somewhat different kind has been envisaged within the 11-dimensional extension of string theory known as M-theory. In M-theory our universe and others are created by collisions between membranes in an 11-dimensional space. Unlike the universes in the "quantum multiverse", these universes can have completely different laws of physics— anything may be possible.

The formation of our universe from a "bubble" of a multiverse was proposed by Linde and fits well with the widely accepted theory of inflation. There is also a strong line of reasoning leading to the conclusion that all possible worlds exist. A majority of cosmologists now believe that Everett's many-worlds interpretation of quantum theory is correct.

Now, and as you can see, my original assumption that with billions of people on this earth there couldn't possibly be a billion different gods just ran into a big stumbling block. After all, if the possibility of different universes exists there likewise exists an infinite number of them, everybody could be right!

But is it true? I decided to tackle the problem from a different perspective, how did we come to exist in the first place?

In The Twinkling of an Eye

We live in a world of white, black, red, yellow, and numerous variations of skin colored human beings. Aside from color we are all the same, not 'basically' the same, we're all the same, period. DNA research shows that we all come from the same 'thing', but there the story of humanity becomes less clear, open to interpretation, and religious belief and history come into the picture.

From a Judeo, Christian, Muslim, belief system, which by the way comprises the majority belief system on the planet, human beings are the creation of a God. Man was made in God's image. Adam was the first man. Eve was the first women made from a rib of Adam. But is this true?

Well, surprisingly the story in the Bible of the creation of Eve from Adams rib is an accurate accounting of how you would go about cloning human beings.

First, the Bible recounts that in making Eve, the female, Adam was put to sleep then a rib was removed from his body. The science we know about this now is that the male of our species has both the Y and X chromosome; the female has only the X. So, only the male of our species can make both a male and a female, the female is only capable of making a copy of herself. Men determine the sex of any human child.

The rib bone comes into play when doing cloning in that bone marrow is needed, specifically the DNA from the marrow, and the only bone in the human body we could fully function without is indeed a rib bone.

Now, and granted, there is a lot of science that goes into this and for those of you interested there's a whole chapter at the end of this book devoted to all the science relating to cloning. So, far from being a myth the Bible actually provides a sound scientific basis for the origins of our species. But, does this make everything it says true about the origins of our species? How we came to be?

No. And the reason is that the book in the Bible that describes all of this. Genesis, is more likened to the Readers Digest Condensed version of the much longer Sumerian creation epic.

The Epic of Creation is the Sumerian version of how the world began and includes to some degree the formation of the other members of the solar system. The Sumerian tale is also likely the source of the earliest chapters of the Bible's Genesis — the latter, which might be considered to be an Executive Summary of the original. Their similarities are highlighted in Comparative Religions (among other places), but the fact that Genesis was written during the Hebrews' captivity in Babylon, c. 600 BCE (where access to the Babylonian version of the Epic was readily available) is undoubtedly important.

The Sumerian Epic of Creation and Genesis both have the interesting feature of being scientifically accurate in terms of what was created first. In creating a world, you begin with energy (light), form the planet itself, divide the land from the water, grow grass, herbs, fruit (in that order), initiate day/night and seasons, create fish, fowl, cattle, creeping thing and beasts of the earth (again, in that order), until finally you create man. Then you get really clever and create woman.

But there is also the distinction between the cosmic creation and the earthly ones. In the Genesis version, the heavens were created separate from the Earth (by the means of a firmament), while the Sun and Moon were specifically mentioned as "two great lights". In the Sumerian version — which is decidedly less ego-earth-centric — all of the other planets may be considered to have been described in various stages of grouping themselves into the current arrangement. It's just that their names were often attributed to gods, instead of gods and planets!

Let There Be Light

"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth."

Assuming this quote from the Bible is a correct statement, it nevertheless does not necessarily imply that the "heaven" thus created consisted of the stars, the galaxies, or even our sun -- much less the entire universe. There is, in fact, the distinct possibility that the act of creation described in the first verse of the first chapter of Genesis refers to the creation of the heaven and the earth as a simultaneous event. In other words, the biblical heaven is only about 4.3 billion years old, in effect, the same age as the earth — a significant deviation from the age of the universe currently celebrating its 15th billionth birthday! The "heaven" mentioned in the first book of Genesis may actually be the outer planets, asteroid belt, or other heavenly bodies in the local solar neighborhood.

Would you believe the preponderance of evidence elicited from ancient and scholarly sources support rather precisely this radical view?

- 1.) Adam was the first test-tube baby some 250,000 years ago?
- 2.) A single mother of the same era (Eve?) was the common ancestor of every human being currently living on the planet?
- 3.) Extraterrestrials created Man in their own image?
- 4.) Certain of these extraterrestrial "gods" sought the destruction of Man through the Great Flood (the Deluge) some 13,000 years ago?
- 5.) Sodom and Gomorrah were destroyed by nuclear fission?

6.) These extraterrestrial "gods" may still be among us?

If these fundamental and profound questions intrigue you or cause you to lay awake at night, you might consider the currently most effective cure of insomnia: listening to the speeches of former Vice-President Al Gore — or Defense Secretary Rumsfeld's reasons for unilaterally invading without cause another nation.

Alternatively, you might want to learn the answers to these questions (or at least a brilliant attempt at the answers) and thereby swear never to listen to political speeches. If so, then rush in where angels, gods, and even life-insurance salesmen fear to venture. Read, study, and devour the true history of earth! Your life will never be quite the same as the result.

Now, let me tell you here that I've got my story to tell, not anyone else's. And again, the last chapter has more than enough books for you to read about the history of man, I'm just borrowing some thoughts here to make my story more understandable to you.

Likewise I'd fail in my mission to tell this story if I didn't address right now those of you who have deep and heartfelt beliefs in your faith, and think what I'm saying is against it.

So, for all of you Christians reading this right now I'm going to ask that you take a look, a really good look at what you believe, or more accurately why you believe what you do.

Jesus once said that you would -know a tree by the fruit it bears, and further, that a good tree couldn't give bad fruit, a bad tree couldn't bear good fruit. Aside from being just common sense there's also a sound scientific basis for that too, but I digress. So, I'm going to use a church as an example here of a bad tree. You know a church! The building you go into every Sunday, the one with the steeple? Do you know what a steeple is?

Well, the steeple is one of the oldest pagan symbols of worship to a really bad god named Baal. What he had his believers do was go to a hill, select a really tall tree at the top, cut it into the shape of a penis then top it with a cross, which is an ancient Egyptian symbol representing a female. Next the men would ejaculate onto this tree while the women would prepare and sacrifice to Baal an infant child. What they got for that was a guarantee of a good harvest from their god. And today it's the idol symbol attached to the church that professes a belief in the very God that was the sworn enemy of Baal and everything he stood for. There was a reason that the Judeo/Christian/Muslim god forbade his followers to create any image, including steeples.

(I'm not meaning to offend any of you Christians out there, I'm just telling you the truth, get used to it. To the rest of you I'm sorry about this slight diversion, I'm sure you understand I had to tell them.)

Now, back to my story....

Aside from the religious stories of our origin there is a scientific one, and we know it as the Big Bang.

The Big Bang Theory is the dominant scientific theory about the origin of the universe. According to the big bang, the universe was created sometime between 10 billion and 20 billion years ago from a cosmic explosion that hurled matter and in all directions.

In 1927, the Belgian priest Georges Lemaitre was the first to propose that the universe began with the explosion of a primeval atom. His proposal came after observing the red shift in distant nebulas by astronomers to a model of the universe based on relativity. Years later, Edwin Hubble found experimental evidence to help justify Lemaitre's theory. He found that distant galaxies in every direction are going away from us with speeds proportional to their distance.

The big bang was initially suggested because it explains why distant galaxies are traveling away from us at great speeds. The theory also predicts the existence of cosmic background radiation (the glow left over from the explosion itself). The Big Bang Theory received its strongest confirmation when this radiation was discovered in 1964 by Arno Penzias and Robert Wilson, who later won the Nobel Prize for this discovery.

Although the Big Bang Theory is widely accepted, it probably will never be proved; consequentially, leaving a number of tough, unanswered questions.

At this point, you well know that I could fill up page after page, in fact devote this whole book, to the numerous stories about our creation. But I'm not going to do that because it's not relevant to my story. What is relevant is what, if any, are the common connections between all of these stories, from all around the world. So, here's what I found!

Heavenly Holograms

Without a doubt in my mind I assert to you now that we are a created species by an intelligence that is unknowable to us now and will remain so as long as we are alive. This isn't a bad thing either, because in knowing everything we'd be taking away our reason for being here in the first place, and I'll explain more of this later.

There is also a question as to whether we're even alive or not, because according to certain equations outlined in the field of quantum mechanics, there is no proof for human beings. That's right, some of the smartest people in the world can't find proof we exist! With one exception however; if they change the model to incorporate all living things, we come out as existing. With only ourselves plugged into the models we don't. How could this be so?

Well, the answer could lie in what our ancestors wrote down many thousands of years ago in ancient Sumeria, and it's one heck of a story too!

They write that there was once a time when the earth was visited by an Alien race from a planet in need of gold, and they came here to mine it. After a period of time the workers of the mines rebelled and stated to their leaders, "We are not miners, we are space travelers!", and they went on strike.

The leaders were in a panic and in not knowing what to do they turned to their scientists for suggestions. The scientists then suggested that they take a life form from this earth and make it like them so they would then have workers for the mines. They agreed upon this course of action and man was created, the first man, the ADAM. They looked upon their creation, saw it was good and decided to make more of these Adams and before long their artificial breeders were working overtime. Now, not content with the pace of production they then decided to make the Adams able to reproduce themselves, so they created woman, EVE.

But something unexpected happened, really unexpected! None of the aliens had done their math! Let me explain: If you take a humanlike animal (a), combine it with an alien (b), you then get $a+b=ab$. Now let's suppose that what the aliens thought of as just a humanlike animal (a) was instead not a separate species but a part of a much larger living organism, which we'll call (c), then you get ACB , which is in fact what happened. In other words, they had unknowingly created something, human beings, who were much more powerful than themselves! "Behold, the man has become like one of us, knowing good and evil; and now, lest he put forth his hand and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live for ever" Genesis 3:22.

What they, the aliens, hadn't taken into account was that the life form they implanted their DNA into was not a separate species, like those that came from their planet, but rather a part of, a cell if you like, of a much larger living organism, the Earth itself.

Immediately the aliens divided themselves into two factions. The first faction advocated the immediate destruction of all human beings. Their reasoning was that they had no right to manipulate life on this planet and by their actions, they had caused incalculable damage with no way to know the full extent of what could happen. The second faction advocated letting the humans live because once life had begun they had no moral right to terminate it.

What to do now?

Mother Earth/Father Doom: It Only Hurts For a Moment

The theory of an intelligent Earth has a name too, Gaia. What is the hypothesis of Gaia? Stated simply, the idea is that we may have discovered a living being bigger, more ancient, and more complex than anything from our wildest dreams. That being called Gaia, is the Earth.

More precisely: that about one billion years after its formation our planet was occupied by a meta-life, which began an ongoing process of transforming this planet into its own substance. All the life forms of the planet are part of Gaia. In a way analogous to the myriad different cell colonies which make up our organs and bodies, the life forms of earth in their diversity co-evolve and contribute interactively to produce and sustain the optimal conditions for the growth and prosperity not of themselves, but of the larger whole, Gaia.

That the very makeup of the atmosphere, seas, and terrestrial crust is the result of radical interventions carried out by Gaia through the evolving diversity of living creatures.

Encountering the Earth from space, a witness would know immediately that the planet was alive. The atmosphere would give it away. The atmospheric compositions of our sister planets, Venus and Mars, are: 95-96 carbon dioxide, 3-4% nitrogen, with traces of oxygen, argon and methane. The earth's atmosphere at present is 79 nitrogen, 21 oxygen with traces of carbon dioxide, methane and argon.

The difference is Gaia, which transforms the outer layer of the planet into environments suitable to its further growth. For example, bacteria and photosynthetic algae began some 2.8 billions of years ago extracting the carbon dioxide and releasing oxygen into the atmosphere, setting the stage for larger and more energetic creatures powered by combustion, including, ultimately, ourselves.

That is how James Lovelock discovered Gaia; from outer space. In the 1960's, during the space race, which followed the launching of Sputnik, he was asked by the Jet Propulsion Laboratory and NASA to help design experiments to detect life on Mars. The Viking lander gathered and tested some Martian soil for life with no results. Lovelock had predicted as much, by analyzing the atmosphere of Mars: it is in a dead equilibrium. By contrast, the atmosphere of Earth is in a "far from equilibrium" state- meaning that there was some other complex process going on which maintained such an unlikely balance.

It occurred to him that if the Viking lander had landed on the frozen waste of Antarctica, it might not have found any trace of life on Earth either. But a sure giveaway would be a complete atmospheric analysis... which the Viking lander was not equipped to do. Lovelock's approach was not popular at NASA because NASA needed a good reason to land on Mars, and the best was to look for life.

Viking found nothing on Mars, but Lovelock had seen the Earth from the perspective of an ET looking for evidence of life. And he began thinking that what he was seeing was not so much a planet adorned with diverse life forms, but a planet transfigured and transformed by a self-evolving and self-regulating living system. By the nature of its activity it seemed to qualify as a living being. He named that being Gaia, after the Greek goddess, which drew the living world forth from Chaos.

"The name of the living planet, Gaia, is not a synonym for the biosphere-mat part of the Earth where living things are seen normally to exist. Still less is Gaia the same as the biota, which is simply the collection of all individual living organisms. The biota and the biosphere taken together form a part but not all of Gaia. Just as the shell is part of the snail, so the rocks, the air, and the oceans are part of Gaia. Gaia, as we shall see, has continuity with the past back to the origins of life, and in the future as long as life persists. Gaia, as a total planetary being, has properties that are not necessarily discernable by just knowing individual species or populations of organisms living together... Specifically, the Gaia hypothesis says that the temperature, oxidation, state, acidity, and certain aspects of the rocks and waters are kept constant, and that this homeostasis is maintained by active feedback processes operated automatically and unconsciously by the biota."

Even the shifting of the tectonic plates, resulting in the changing shapes of the continents, may result from the massive limestone deposits left in the earth by bioforms eons ago.

You may find it hard to swallow the notion that anything as large and apparently inanimate as the Earth is alive. Surely, you may say, the Earth is almost wholly rock, and nearly all incandescent with heat. The difficulty can be lessened if you let the image of a giant redwood tree enter your mind.

The tree undoubtedly is alive, yet 99 of it is dead. The great tree is an ancient spire of dead wood, made of lignin and cellulose by the ancestors of the thin layer of living cells, which constitute its bark. How like the Earth, and more so when we realize that many of the atoms of the rocks far down into the magma were once part of the ancestral life of which we all have come.

The root question of Gaia's critics, and a central point in his theory concerns the difference between a planetary environment, which might only be the aggregate result of myriad independent life forms co-evolving and sharing the same host, and one, which is ultimately created by life forms deployed, so to speak, to accomplish the purpose of the larger being. Is the idea of Gaia only a romantic and dramatized description of the terrestrial biosphere and its effects, or is there a planetary being, whose life cycle must be counted in the billions of years, which spawns these evolving life forms to suit the purpose of its being?

Do our kidney cells ask each other these sorts of questions? While your white blood cells thrive and reproduce, going about their business, they are indisputably serving the life of the larger body which you use, though whatever consciousness they experience in their realm is certainly far from that which you, the larger being, the whole, experience.

Recent scientific work, such as in the field of complex systems, have begun to give us the impression that this opposition of terms, the larger caused by its constituents, or the constituents created by the larger, may be one of those oppositions which are the constructs of our own minds, and must be dropped if we are to understand the truth, which is neither the one nor the other, but more difficult to comprehend and more fascinating to behold. Perhaps there is awareness appropriate at every level. Perhaps that is a property of life.

And what might be the nature of its evolution, this planetary being called Gaia? Anthropocentrists to the last, we might assume that the production of the human species is a great step upward for Gaia, a sort of rapidly evolving brain tissue. Or that she prepares the earth as a cradle and crucible of consciousness evolving. Other analogies come to mind: are we part of her arsenal of interplanetary spores?

And what might constitute a life cycle for such a being- might it be as strange as that of the slime mold? What stage would Gaia be in now? Is our species part of her maturity or an incubation period? Is Gaia herself somehow part of a larger living being, perhaps on a galactic scale? If so, how do the cells of this larger being remain in communication? Will we eventually be able to experience something of the awareness, which Gaia has?

Lovelock points out that Gaia, being ancient and resourceful enough to have carried out these successive changes of the planet in spite of asteroid collisions and other setbacks, is herself probably not endangered by the relatively momentary depredations of the human species, as it befouls and cripples the bio-dynamics of its environment. Rather, the danger is to the human race, not only from our own actions, but also by Gaia's reaction to them.

He adds the caveat however, that the passage of a bullet is also momentary, but the damage nonetheless lethal, and that we are not in a position yet to say whether or not some sudden, human caused imbalance, at a critical juncture, might be catastrophic to Gaia.

Lovelock first exposed his idea in his 1979 book, Gaia, a New Look at Life on Earth. The science behind the hypothesis was still sketchy, and it provoked a storm of criticism. It also provoked a lot of research, and the resulting body of information has encouraged Lovelock to publish this second book, a more confident and complete exposition of the Gaia hypothesis. The Ages of Gaia is easily readable for the educated layperson, but includes plenty of scientific depth.

So, you can begin to see the dilemma facing the aliens. If this earth was indeed an entire living organism, then they were messing with powers beyond their comprehension, that could Ultimately result in their own demise.

They could also see that the existing human beings they had created had started going nuts as they didn't have any natural balance to themselves, didn't know whom or what they were a part of. So, the decision was made to destroy them all. And the Great Flood occurred.

I want to take a few moments here and talk about that flood, as it's important to fully understand a couple of things. First, on every continent, in every tongue, in every race on earth, the story of the Great Flood has been told. Far from being a regional event it was in fact the last great cataclysm to affect this earth, and it still resides in our memories, is part of the mental/spiritual framework of who we are as a species. Second, the exact method of how this done, why it occurred, is not the subject of this book but I've provided a list of books for you to read if you're really interested in tins.

With the Earth itself being the Mother of human beings, who is the Father? For the answer we look to our ancient history again and find indeed that he has a name, and it is El.

El is the name by which the supreme Canaanite deity is known. This is also a name by which God is called in the Old Testament - El, the God (Elohim) of Israel (el elohe yisrael: Gen. 33:20). In most prose it occurs more often with an adjunct: El Elyon (the most high God, Gen. 14:18), El Shaddai (traditionally, God Almighty, Gen. 17:1), El Hai (The living God, Josh. 3:10), and very commonly in the plural of majesty, Elohim. In Hebrew poetry El is much more frequent, where it stands quite often without any adjunct (Ps. 18:31, 33, 48; 68:21; Job 8:3).

The word El is a generic name for "god" in Northwest Semitic (Hebrew and Ugaritic) and as such it is also used in the Old Testament for heathen deities or idols (Ex. 34:14; Ps. 81:10; Is. 44:10). The original generic term was 'ilum; dropping the mimation and the nominative case ending (u) becomes 'el in Hebrew. It was almost certainly an adjectival formation (intransitive participle) from the root "to be strong, powerful" ('wl), meaning "The Strong (or Powerful) One."

In Canaanite paganism the el, par excellence, was the head of the pantheon. As the god, El was, in accordance with the general irrationality and moral grossness of Canaanite religion, a dim and shadowy figure, who, Philo says, had three wives, who were also his sisters, and who could readily step down from his eminence and become the hero of sordid escapades and crimes. The Ugaritic poems add the crime of uncontrolled lust to his character and the description of his seduction of two unnamed women is the most sensuous in ANE literature (much of Ugaritic literature is R rated at best).

Despite all this. El was considered the exalted "father of years" (abu shanima), the "father of man" (abu adami), and "father bull", that is, the progenitor of the gods, tacitly likened to a bull in the midst of a herd of cows. Like Homer's Zeus, he was "the father of men and gods."

"And it came to pass, when men began to multiply on the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them, That the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose... There were nephilim in the earth in those days; and also after that, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them, the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown." Genesis 6:1-4

According to the Sumerian creation epic. El was the leader of the Nephilim, but who are they?

Nephilim is often translated as "giants", a legitimate and appropriate interpretation, but one, which may be only partially accurate. A better definition might be "those who came down", "those who descended", or "those who were cast down." The Anunnaki of ancient Sumerian texts is similarly defined as "those who from heaven to earth came". Many researchers have all identified the Nephilim as the Anunnaki, more specifically, essentially the rank and file.

Remember too that virtually all open-minded historical and theological scholars agree the Old Testament's book of Genesis was extracted from the older Sumerian records, if only because of the similarity in their Comparative Religions. The Enuma Elish, the Sumerian Epic of Creation, and Genesis have a variety of common elements. Stories of a Great Flood and Deluge, among other stories, are also common to both Sumerian and Biblical accounts. An inevitable conclusion is that the Anunnaki were as real as Noah, Moses or Abraham.

Laurence Gardner, a leading Sumerian researcher, has written: "Every item of written and pictorial attestation confirms that the ancient Sumerians were absolutely sincere about the existence of the Anunnaki, and those such as Enki, Enlil, Nin-khursag and Inanna fulfilled earthly functions with designated community duties. They were patrons and founders; they were teachers and justices; they were technologists and kingmakers. They were jointly and severally venerated as archons and masters, but they were certainly not idols of religious worship as the ritualistic gods of subsequent cultures became.

In fact, the word which was eventually translated to become 'worship' was avod, which meant quite simply, 'work'. The Anunnaki presence may baffle historians, their language may confuse linguists and their advanced techniques may bewildered scientists, but to dismiss them is foolish. The Sumerians have themselves told us precisely who the Anunnaki were, and neither history nor science can prove otherwise."

The Sumerian records recorded in great detail the stories of the Anunnaki, and among these, that of Enki, Enlil, Ninkī, manna Utu, Ningishzida, Marduk, and many others. Chief among these stories was the continuing conflict between Enki and Enlil, the sons of the supreme god of the time, Anu, or El Much of ancient human history, and the Biblical Genesis, can be explained as the militant differences between these two half- brothers, and how they affected the life of all sentient beings on Earth.

But the Anunnaki were more than just a pair of squabbling half- brothers. They were the council of Gods and Goddesses, who periodically met to consider their future actions with respect to each other, and probably as a smaller, nondescript item on their agenda, the fate of mankind.

The Anunnaki, depending upon the context, were the Nephilim the gods that Abraham's father, Terah, (according to the book of Joshua) was reputed to have served, the fallen angels, the lesser individuals of the race from which Anu, Enki, Enlil, Inanna and the other notables had sprung, and the "judges" over the question of life and death. They were in fact the bene haelohim, which translates as "the sons of the gods", or equally likely, "the sons of the goddesses."

For example, from Psalm 82:

"Jehovah takes his stand at the Council of El to deliver judgment among the elohim."
"You too are gods, sons of El Elyon, all of you."

The Anunnaki have also been equated with the "Watchers" (who are also mentioned in the books of Daniel and Jubilees), i.e. "Behold a watcher and an holy one came down from heaven." Daniel 4:13

According to Zecharia Sitchin, and his interpretation of ancient Sumerian texts, the Anunnaki were extraterrestrial (a.k.a. "angels"?), who were an extremely long-lived race, potentially living as long as 500,000 years. Laurence Gardner reduces this to more on the order of 50,000 years and notes specifically that the Anunnaki were not immortal. He points out that no records are currently extant which relate to their natural deaths, but the violent deaths of Apsu, Tiamat, Mummu, and Dumu-zi are provided in some detail. (Sitchin and Gardner also disagree on the date of the Great Deluge/Flood; Sitchin assuming a time frame of 11,000 BCE, while Gardner assumes one of 4,000

BCE) Sitchin's book, The 12th Planet, published in 1976 was the first modern volume to begin to describe the Anunnaki, their arrival on Earth supposedly some 485,000 years ago, and from where they had come - a planet called Nibiru. Sitchin believes Nibiru to be in an orbit about our sun, but in a strongly elliptical orbit which requires 3,600 Earth years to make a complete orbit. Nibiru's perihelion (closest point of approach to the Sun) is thought to be within the main asteroid belt between Mars and Jupiter, at a distance from the Sun of approximately 2.75 A.U. (an A.U. being the distance from the Sun to the Earth). (The Annals of Earth include a detailed description of how Nibiru created the asteroid belt by destroying a planet, Tiamat, in roughly the same orbit, and which created the Earth in the aftermath, the Earth being a remnant of the greater, destroyed planet.)

Nibiru is not known to modern astronomy primarily due to the extreme elliptical nature of its orbit and the fact its aphelion (furthest point in the planet's orbit from the Sun) is more than eight times the distance from the Sun to the planet Pluto (the latter being some 40 A.U. away, and thus the former, some 32 (A.U. distant). Furthermore, Nibiru may be now far out in deep space and unlikely to be detected. (Or close by, e.g. Planet X.)

While Sitchin and Gardner may disagree with the extent of the long lives of the Anunnaki, it is clear that these gods and goddesses, barring accidents or "Anunnaki-cide" lived a very long time. It has also been theorized that because of their long lives, they do not quite move in "the fast lane" — at least to the extent humans do.

This could be fundamentally important in that, quite possibly the human life span, while enormously brief as compared to the Anunnaki gods and goddesses, might nevertheless be compensated by the humans possessing the ability to achieve a great deal in a relatively short time. The creativity of a shortened and thus highly motivated lifespan is likely to be enormously greater than that of a god or semi-god resting on their laurels.

This may also relate to the idea of why the gods and goddesses of the Anunnaki even bother with mankind. Humans may, on the one hand, act as workers to accomplish the Anunnaki's agenda, but an accelerated creativity may be well worth the trouble for the Anunnaki to manage a crew as motley as the human race.

But the connection between humans and the Anunnaki is much more profound than that of masters and slaves. All the evidence strongly advocates the concept that Adam and Eve and their ancestors, cousins, and what-have-you were created by genetic engineering and mixing the DNA of Anunnaki with that of Homo erectus, the reigning progenitor of man at the time. Fundamentally, this was because the Anunnaki needed someone to work the mines in search of gold, as we talked about before.

The most fundamental question with respect to the Anunnaki is whether or not they're still on Earth! Sitchin has pointed out that he never said they left (and there is no evidence that they did). There was, however, an apparently fundamental Anunnaki policy shift circa 600 BCE wherein the overt, day-to-day interference in human affairs by the Anunnaki disappeared. There is also the scenario encapsulated in Richard Wagner's classic opera The Ring of the Nibelung, which included Night Falls on the Gods and the Entrance of the Gods Into Valhalla -titles which are suggestive of possible changes in status of the Anunnaki. Finally, there is evidence to suggest that this state of affairs may be temporary, and may be scheduled to end with the end of the Mayan Calendar on or about 2012 AD.

From mankind's point of view, the dysfunctional nature of the Anunnaki family, and the continuing rivalry of Enki and Enlil, may still be ongoing and having enormous effects on the quality of our physical, emotional, mental and spiritual lives. It's a very important question, and one that needs to be answered by each of us. And the reason is simple, they tried to kill us!

They Didn't Teach Us This!

"I have determined to make an end of all flesh; for the earth is filled with violence through them; behold, I will destroy them with the earth." Genesis 6:13

So now we have the situation where our father has seen the mess he's made and the solution he's come to is simply destroy us, along with our Mom. However, it's not exactly out of anger but rather one of restoring a balance to the universe. But, his sons, Enki and Enlil, are divided on the issue. And when this happens to the families of kings, what usually happens next is a war.

And that is exactly what happened, a war broke out, and rages to this very day, with human beings and the very earth we live on hanging in the balance.

The first thing that happened was indeed an attempt was made to destroy the earth, the Great Flood, but we had help in surviving. The story is about Noah and I'm not going to go into great detail about it because if you don't know about the Great Flood and Noah you can read it about it in the Bible. There are also a number of great books relating to the Flood, and again, I've listed them in the last chapter of this book.

So, the attempt was made to kill human beings and the earth but it failed and caused a civil war to break out among the 'gods', the Anunnaki. And when we the human race became stronger and multiplied after the flood, we did what came natural to us, we plotted revenge!

"Then they said, "Come, let us build ourselves a city, and a tower with its top in the heavens, and let us make a name for ourselves, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth." Genesis 11:4

The story as it's written in the Bible talks about human beings after the flood building a tower to heaven. However, the exact words used don't describe a tower being built but rather a space ship or more likely a space weapon. Because by then, we knew who we were and how we came to be. We were also being looked after and protected by one of the warring factions of the Anunnaki. So, a truce was called and meetings held, whereupon it was decided that the best thing to do with the human beings was to separate them, divide them up, give them different languages, different skin colors, different ways to live. But, more than anything else, keep the human beings from getting together as ONE. That's when we're at our most dangerous.

As it was back then, so it is now. And so I came to a reasonable answer about whom and what we are and why we're in the mess that we're in now.

Hidden From View

In May of 1979, I had a series of dreams, more like visions, in which I saw a large American Airlines jet taking off from I runway. As it began to lift into the air it made a sudden dip with one wing, turned over backwards, then fell nose first into the ground. The explosion was a terrible thing to see and I could actually feel the deaths of all the people aboard. Very rarely since then, have I cried more than on those nights 25 years ago.

Along with those visions came a 'sense', or more like a compulsion, to do something. But what to do wasn't an easy thing to figure out. I first began by telling my family, who listened but that was about all they could do. I called American Airlines and they hung up on me. These were the days before the Internet so finding resources were very limited. So, I called the FAA, The Federal Aviation Administration.

Unbeknownst to me the FAA actually had a written procedure that dealt with people calling in claiming to have a premonition of a plane crashing, and I was put in touch with Paul Williams, the facility manager for the FAA at the Greater Cincinnati Airport.

For four intense days Mr. Williams, his immediate superior Jack Barker, and myself had numerous conversations relating to my vision. Notes were taken and brainstorming sessions occurred where we tried to piece everything together to pinpoint the answer to the questions I didn't have the answers for; where and when?

But we failed. On May 25, 1979, American Airlines flight 191 on a take off from Chicago's O'Hara field lost an engine, inverted, then crashed into the ground killing all 271 passengers and crew. It remains to this very day the worst airline disaster in American history.

In the months and years following the disaster the story about my having known about crash became worldwide news. From front-page stories in the newspapers to featured articles in magazines, to television interviews, I was celebrated because I had the distinction of being the only person who had had a precognitive experience fully documented prior to the event by a government agency.

Though offered thousands of dollars for the exclusive rights to my story I turned down every offer and in 1985 did my last American interview with the ABC television news program 20/20. In 1999 I did my last interview with the BBC, British Broadcasting Corporation, under the condition that the program never be aired in the United States.

My reasons were, at least to my way of thinking, simple. I could not profit from a vision that I had no idea where it came from and that had caused so many deaths. And I'm going to talk about that here for a bit, the deaths.

Without having a background to understand human beings and our emotions, I watched every night for 10 nights the deaths of hundreds of souls. And I could actually feel each and every one of them cry out. And the words I'm using don't even come close the emotional outpouring I felt from that plane. The best way to describe it is that for those 10 nights I experienced the pain and anguish as a part of myself.

The past 25 years of my life have been devoted to understanding what happened to me, and more specifically why it happened in the first place. Why, out of all the people on earth, was I 'chosen' to have these visions? Those were the questions I sought answers for, and what has taken the past 25 years of my life to find out.

I believe right now that reason for what happened to me back then has to do with what we are facing today. In March 2003, and for only the second time in my life, I had another series of visions, and like the last time, 10 of them in a row.

What I 'see' is the Earth from the perspective of space. As I'm watching the earth I can see the moon over to the right side and what appears to be a planetary type object approaching the earth from straight underneath. This object has two main characteristics, it is very large and it is very dark. As it approaches the earth my viewpoint narrows towards the earth itself, the North American continent, and then as it veers off, at a 45 degree angle, I see the greater portion of the western part of the North American continent erupt like a giant volcano. From this eruption dark gray clouds billow into the atmosphere and I can make out fire below, or rather within, the clouds themselves. There immediately follows a ripple emanating from the eruption that goes around the whole earth. At that point the vision ends, but not my dread.

I'm going to digress here for a moment to explain to you something about myself. First of all, since the late 1980's I've been a very private man and have worked hard to build a life of solitude and quiet. Many years of research have also led me to know that the first part of the 21st Century would be a time of great chaos and change for the entire world. In knowing this I've also prepared for as much as possible including building an underground house and ensuring that we have years of food, seeds, water, medicine, and other things one would need to survive for an extended period of time on their own

During these past 15 years I've of course talked with family and friends about what I've discovered, but never to the public at large. But this has changed now because of the new vision I've had. And against my need to remain a private person I'm also obligated to inform anyone who will listen, like you, of what I know. I'd like you to keep in mind something very important however, I don't know the time frame of what I saw, only that it is 'soon'. My conjecture that 2004 is a year to watch out for is based upon information I've gathered over the past 9 months and is very subjective.

Remember this as you continue reading this book! I don't know the day or hour, only that what I saw is going to happen. If you aren't prepared now you should start preparing if you feel you should survive. I know that there are many people in this world who will not survive, in fact the vast majority of humanity. But I also know that those who do survive know it now, can actually feel within them selves a compulsion to prepare and survive. And in later chapters I'll explain more to you about this, but for now let's take a journey and explore some of our common past!

Houses Built On Sand: Wormwood in History

Never in history have so many human beings been interested in a particular planet, it seems these days. Not a day goes by where you can't find some new information relating to Planet X. From those that wholly believe, to those that think believers in Planet X to be crazy, there is no shortage of opinions on either side. What I've tried to do however is to look at the issue of Planet X from all sides, sort of 'walk around' the question and see if I can see anything that might be missing, or rather may have been overlooked. Here's some of what I've found.

"The name of the star is Wormwood. A third of the waters became wormwood, and many men died of the water, because it was made bitter." Revelation 8:11

Well, as you can image my search began with the Bible where indeed there is mentioned, a cryptic one to be sure, about a 'star', planet, of some kind called Wormwood. And further research shows that we are far from the first generation of human beings to be concerned about this Wormwood. So dreaded is the ancient knowledge of this planet that our ancestors- handed down to each and every one of us an instinctual knowledge of when it would come again.

The devastation and utter destruction of life on this earth is even said to have produced in humanity an actual amnesia in us because to remember it was too overwhelming. The ancient myths and legends of our ancestors is not only full of the stories of this planet's last visit, it's what they are all about, period.

As a warning to the future our ancestors built, upon every continent on earth, pyramids and secreted in them the records of how and when this planet would return and how to prepare for its coming. And what were they warning us about? Wormwood is reported to be four times larger, and twenty three times more dense than the Earth. The Bible states that when it passes, its magnetic and gravitational effects upon the Earth's molten iron core will cause increased earthquakes/ volcanic eruptions, and other phenomena.

Speaking of the last days, it states: "Then the second angel sounded: And something like a great mountain burning with fire was thrown into the sea, and a third of the sea became blood. And a third of the living creatures in the sea died, and a third of the ships were destroyed. Then the third angel sounded: And a great star fell from heaven, burning like a torch, and it fell on a third of the rivers and on the springs of water. The name of the star is Wormwood. A third of the waters became wormwood, and many men died from the water, because it was made bitter."

I have noticed over the last ten years the drastic changes in our present day weather patterns, increased earthquake/ volcanic activity, reports of the gradual slowing of the Earth's rotation and geomagnetic planetary field deviations, and other anomalies. All of which are allegedly due to the energy being released by our planet in response to the gravitational field that is preceding Planet X. And coupled with these changes are the efforts of world governments to keep telling us that everything is OK.

NASA will continue to identify objects ahead and around Wormwood to misdirect attention. The normally helpful and professional NASA employees are being evasive and condescending when asked about it. How NASA has chosen to handle their knowledge of Planet X fits into a pattern of concealment, Wormwood /Planet X has intentionally been made to sound ridiculous and confusing for several reasons.

One of which is to avoid causing panic among the world's population. Many websites and articles continue to be written about Planet X that spread lies. They say it only may exist and comes around only once every few million years if it does. This misinformation is widespread and done with a purpose.

Planet X's mass, magnetism and density are such that it disrupts the surface of every planet it passes. In fact, history shows approximately 7 years prior to its passage its far reaching electromagnetic/gravitational influence changes Earth's core flows triggering weather, volcanic and seismic activity.

Since early 1996 traditional weather has changed dramatically, breaking all time records regularly. The up-tick of earthquakes, volcanic incidents and changes in electromagnetics are being kept out of the media as much as possible. Weather alone can falsely be blamed on global warming and sun cycles but not earth's rumblings at the same time.

Being prepared and forewarned gives one an excellent chance to survive.

Some may wish they never learned or prepared because of the difficulties presented to them, compared to their lifestyle before. At that time I would simply say that you were primarily responsible for drawing the information toward yourself and determined your level of personal preparation. I'm not fishing now for your future thanks, but am trying to avoid you berating the messenger. Just learning now and not being able to prepare because of family ties or financial binds could end up causing needless worry, prior to your passing on. So, be careful before you jump in too deep here. It's not always better to know.

My belief system tells me that there is a reason for everything. Science is finding greater evidence for order in chaos at every turn. For those who would label me a messenger of doom, please do you and me a favor, don't finish reading this book.

My focus is to find people who want this information, or who have been drawn to it by whatever means to make their right choice. Staying alive might be a good one. The fact that you're reading this perhaps means that your gut instinct is telling you something is not quite right with the world, and the reasons you've run across thus far have been less than adequate.

There's no doom in being made aware that you live on the railroad tracks, the train is approaching and what time it will arrive, so you can pull up your roots to get the heck out of the way. It's ignorance that will put you in harms way during the up and coming cataclysms. There will be many places that have a good chance of being safe. I'm now going to paint a word portrait using some of my words and those of others. In order to view the mosaic, look at it in its entirety. Focusing too closely on one part or another might result in your missing the big picture.

In the 1980's astronomers were searching for a 10th planet in our solar system, one that explained the perturbations of our outer planets, Uranus and Neptune. The planet was discovered, but since then we have heard nothing more about Planet X. Why has the discovery not been publicized since then?

Zechariah Sitchin tells of the ancient Sumerian legends of a planet with a comet-like orbit that came into our area of the solar system every 3600 years. The inhabitants of this planet were like gods to the earth natives. They shuttled from their planet to earth with rockets and mined gold to take back to their home planet, Nibiru. He contends they were the ones the Bible in Genesis refers to as the Nefilim, and as giants.

Could this same Planet X or 12th Planet be the source of the many myths and legends that describe comets as portents of doom, and speak of battling planets? Could it be the cause of the periodic destructions of great civilizations of the past by earthquakes, volcanoes, tidal waves, as described in many ancient texts, including the Bible, and by Velikovsky? Does Planet X cause a pole shift on earth as it passes by?

Geologists, not recognizing the periodic cataclysmic nature of our planet, look at ancient fossils and calculate they are millions of years old. That is only because they calculate the cataclysmic events as required to take millions of years to happen. Once they recognize that these events could have occurred suddenly, in a matter of days, their historical timelines will be drastically altered.

After seeing the Comet Shoemaker-Levy crash into the planet Jupiter a few years ago, astronomers now realize the possibility of asteroids and comets similarly affecting earth.

Their most recent discoveries of planets circling other stars, planets with elliptical orbits, circling two stars, "rogue" planets, methane "brown-dwarf" planets, are all proof that no matter how certain science is one day that something is silly and impossible, they can be proven quite wrong the next. The best scientists are, therefore, not the hardened skeptics, but those who continually keep an open mind.

In January 1981 several daily newspapers stated that Pluto's orbit indicates that Planet X exists. The report stated that an astronomer from the U.S Naval Observatory told a meeting of the American Astronomical Society that irregularities in the orbit of Pluto indicates that the solar system contains a 10th planet. He also noted that this came to no surprise to Zechariah Sitchin, whose book about this planet came out three years prior.

In 1982 NASA itself officially recognized the possibility of Planet X, with an announcement that an object is really there -far beyond the outermost planets.

One year later in 1983 the newly launched IRAS (Infrared Astronomical Satellite) quickly found Planet X (the 10th). The Washington Post summary of an interview with the chief IRAS scientist from JPL California had these words to say, a heavenly body as large as Jupiter (The size being in perfect parallel to the ancients' knowledge) and part of this solar system has been found in the direction of the constellation of Orion by an orbiting telescope. The orbiting telescope found it right where it was sent to look. They had known of its existence and location for years but wanted to confirm it with their own technological eyes. These are facts I strongly urge you to check out for yourself. There have been attempts to cover-up this event and rewrite history.

Perhaps Nibiru is not a planet at all, but a small system consisting of a Brown Dwarf Star and a small accompanying planet. Brown dwarfs were, until recently, only theoretical planet/star hybrids. Astronomers believe that they have now located some brown dwarfs, whose luminosity is so low as to make their detection extremely difficult. Essentially, they are the product of an accreting gas cloud that is several times more massive than that which eventually made Jupiter. Beyond a certain threshold of mass, reactions within this world lead to the emission of heat and a minute amount of light, but the body is still too small to set off the thermonuclear chain reactions that ignite a conventional star. They appear a dull red, contrary to the colour that their name would suggest, and do not increase beyond the spherical dimensions of Jupiter, despite having a greater mass.

They are thought to be relatively commonplace in the Universe, and their relative lack of appearances thus far reflect their dark star qualities. If one is in orbit around the Sun, then it is quite plausible that its detection by telescope has not yet occurred, so one can understand the paucity of tangible data from further afield. But as we become more able to detect and observe planets around other stars, so will our ability to observe this maverick in our own system increase.

The sensational aspect of all this is when one starts to consider this world as a very dim star, rather than a planet. The implication is that we are in a binary star system! Of course, the brown dwarf alluded to is not a star in the conventional sense, but it may emit enough light and heat to make possible moons around it life supporting. Considering its distance from the Sun in the extreme cold of the void, that possibility is an exciting one. It is certainly the case that any terrestrial planet that far from the Sun would not be able to support life on its own.

So, what if this Brown Dwarf in fact had planets circling in close proximity around it. Surely this would better explain the presence of life. After all, the Nibiruans are supposed to have lived on the Earth and then fled to their home planet, which takes it on a 3600-year orbit out of the known solar system. If; that was the case, and it was just a planet and not an actual Brown Dwarf/Planetary system, how could life be sustained in the far reaches of our Solar System? The Brown Dwarf theory makes much more sense and has a correlation with the Hopi Prophecies. When an object in space is moving towards the observer its colour changes by means of the Doppler effect. This is effectively where the light waves are "squashed" together and shift towards a different light spectrum. When the object is moving towards the observer at high speed it turns blue. The Hopi prophecies quite clearly refer to the Blue Star that shines in the heavens.

Newton's law of gravity is insufficient to explain planetary science. Planets are magnetic objects and also have a repulsion force that creates the balance between them and keeps them moving. The momentum theory for planets is positively ridiculous. What we call modern astronomical and planetary science is still very much in the dark ages because of this. Play with two magnets to find out that if both are turned a certain way it's difficult to get them to touch because of the repulsion force. The exclusion of the repulsion force in planetary science is a gigantic flaw and political embarrassment to any who've been involved. The story of the Emperor with no clothes is a perfect analogy for how it's being dealt with.

The earth's 30 miles thick crust acts as a magnetic shield, hiding the true magnetic relationships between planets from our terrestrial scientific instruments. If you want to begin to understand the workings of the solar system you would do better just to eat a Fig Newton cookie than to read Newton's law of gravity that does not take into account the repulsion force. The most interesting scientific revelations of planets that are discovered are generally kept away from the public under the guise of military security.

History records many names for Planet X. The Sumerians called it the 12th planet or Nibiru (translates into; planet of passing). The Babylonians and Mesopotamians called it Marduk, The King of The Heavens and The Great Heavenly Body. The ancient Hebrews referred to it as the Winged Globe because of its long orbit high among the stars. The Greeks called it Nemesis. (Its most telling name) Prophets have named it The Blue Star, The Red Star, The Fiery Messenger, and The Comet of Doom among others. No matter what the name used, it's the same object that has the same effects before and during its passage of earth. The Sumerians also had a name for its approximate 3600-year orbit (A Shar). The ancient Hindu astronomers named Treta Yuga (3600 years) and the destruction it causes Kali Yuga.

The evidence for Planet X is overwhelming in our historical past. The present changes on earth are accelerating, not diminishing. These are true facts, what more can I say?

Look to Discovering Archaeology, July/August 1999, on page 72. The date 1628 BCE is given for a world wide catastrophic event. Approximately 3600 years ago and coinciding with its return at this time. Page 70 shows a medieval picture with a large comet looking object as big as the sun streaking across the sky horizontally with a giant tail. Below is a town that is shaking apart with hysterical people in the streets.

Its elliptical orbit takes it around two suns. The other sun it orbits is our sun's dark twin.

Our best telescopic equipment on and off earth is closely monitoring Nibiru's inbound approach. This is one of many reasons the orbiting Hubble telescope live feed is hidden from our view.

Each time it approaches it starts a chain of events that culminates with it passing by and causing our earth's surface to change. These changes are the cause of massive death and destruction. History is rich with these stories. Many people from the past didn't draw the connection between what looked to be a large comet overhead and what they were experiencing at the time (volcanoes erupting, earthquakes, land masses sinking and rising, tidal waves, severe weather and floods). Some of these writers from the distant past simply noted what they thought was a foreboding sign or messenger of the prophets, instead of the cause for their woes.

In 1995 Planet X became close enough to us that its magnetism started to effect earth in a big way, which increases now daily. The closer it gets to us the faster it moves toward earth and the stronger its magnetic effects become. There is an ebb and flow to these events that are akin to the calm waves before the next big set. Surfers would be most familiar with this analogy. Expect things to get worse as it approaches nearer but not in a straight line.

Our own sun's gravity is what is pulling it closer and faster. Planet X is not going to hit earth or the sun because of the repulsion force, which comes into play as they near each other. There is still reason to be forewarned and concerned.

Earth now has two strong magnetic influences in the vicinity (our sun being the main one) and its core is heating up because of it. It's like a car with the accelerator and brake on at the same time. The sun is pushing and pulling on earth one way and Planet X is now upsetting that balance with its own set of influences. This has been the reason for all the strange weather and seismic activity as of late.

The records of this approximate 7 years of turmoil prior to passing are part of biblical record from at least the last time it came by earth. With correct scientific and historical information you don't need to be a prophet to predict the same cycle of events are happening again during Planet X's approach. These events are just a minor taste of what will come when it goes by this time. And yet even these relatively minor events can cause much destruction.

Many areas of the world will begin to be severely effected even before the date of passing, so don't think you can wait to the last minute and then jet away safely!! There will be nowhere to go. That is why you are seeing such drastic changes in air travel and security, because when the warning does it go out it won't go to you or me. Those who have been chosen will just suddenly up and go with armed guards at every airport to prevent the unwashed masses from trying to flee and getting in their way.

The Wars of Marduk

My story wouldn't be complete without mentioning a god named Marduk.

Mighty Marduk, the all powerful war god and sky god of the Babylonians, built Babylon as his home and created humankind to dwell there and toil there for the gods after he slew the evil Tiamat, so myth tells us.

Son of Ea and Dumkina, Marduk began his existence in the deep abyss, in the heart of the holy Apsu. He was born whole, strong, and beautiful with four eyes and four ears, and it is said that he spat fire when he spoke. He had the gift of magic and command over the winds. Indeed, Marduk was a hero, a leader right from his birth. He belongs to the younger gods and was chosen King of the Igigi to destroy Tiamat.

Tiamat, the terrible earth goddess, is primeval chaos. She belongs to the rank of the older gods, whom she has been threatening and abusing. And it is Marduk who is called upon to kill her in the Babylonian Creation Myth.

The Babylonian Creation Myth tells of the battle between Marduk and Tiamat, between good and evil. This myth was most likely first written down between the 8th and 12th century BCE but it comes from an earlier time, from ancient Sumerian mythology, from the Enuma Elish.

Marduk, greater than all the gods, was chosen avenger of the gods and made king. His heroic task was to kill Tiamat for her terror and abuse of the gods. So Marduk fashioned a net to ensnare her, then he called upon the winds and mounted his chariot led by his fierce team and set out after the great monster. He followed the sound of Tiamat's rage and found her.

Tiamat tried to undo Marduk with spells and words, but Marduk was too clever for her. He challenged her to one-on-one battle and she accepted. They fought hard and finally Marduk caught her in his net using the winds against her. Tiamat in return tried to swallow Marduk but he sent Imhullu into her. This wind raged through her body, holding her mouth open and blew her up. Then mighty Marduk shot an arrow, which pierced her belly, and her heart and he straddled her dead body in victory. Next, he destroyed her evil band of followers by trampling them into the ground and he recovered the Tablet of Destinies from them.

Returning to Tiamat's carcass he wondered what to do with her remains, so he smashed her skull and severed her arteries, the blood streaming forth on the north wind to the far reaches of the world. He ripped her huge dead body in two and raised the top half to create the arc of the sky. Her eyes became the source for the Tigris and the Euphrates rivers and from her udders Marduk made the mountains. The gods rejoiced in Marduk's victory over the evil Tiamat and lavished him with gifts including his fifty names. Marduk surveyed the great expanse of the sky that he created and then chose Babylon as his home on earth and created humans to work the land.

What does this myth tell us about the ancient Babylonians? It tells us that they revered their powerful god Marduk as the Great Creator, but it also gives us insight into what they thought of themselves. Since they were created by their god solely to work the land and serve the gods they did not expect much in the way of eternal salvation. They were at the mercy of their gods for their lives and then went to a dreadful afterlife. They were the servants, the slaves of the gods. But they rejoiced in life, in simply being alive, and they enjoyed what wonders life had to offer them.

But wait! There's more to this story.

When I was in grade school I was taught that the Asteroid Belt was a planet that formed with the rest of the solar system. It then, for some unstated reason, broke up. Today it is said that the Asteroid Belt never quite came together to be a planet. The model I was taught years ago had the Sun and planets forming together.

The Sun was the big mass in the center of a rotating disk of gas, mostly hydrogen and helium, and dust, small clumps of atoms of heavier elements. The planets were small masses moving in circular orbits around the big mass. As gravity pulled all these masses together, the Sun compresses to the point that a nuclear fire started. The planets condensed, melted, differentiated and cooled.

Today the feeling is that the Sun formed first with the rest of the disk condensing into chunks. These chunks kept crashing into each other until the planets formed. It is said that the Jupiter orbit caused a range of gravitational instability where a ring of clutter, the Asteroid Belt, now circles the Sun. This range of gravitational instability did not allow a planet to form. These chunks all got organized into circular orbits and now follow each other around the Sun.

Ancient myth suggests however that there was a planet between Mars and Jupiter at one time. In the Babylonian Creation Myth this planet was destroyed by another object. In the creation myth the destroyed planet is called Tiamat. The destroyer is called Nibiru. Nibiru with a mass of eight times that of Jupiter would tear apart a planet if the encounter was close enough. Such a Nibiru would most likely be a brown dwarf star. A brown dwarf star is too big to be a planet and too small to light a nuclear fire and become a full-fledged star.

So picture this. A brown dwarf star, Nibiru, entered into the solar system and came down a couple of diameters behind and under Tiamat. This close encounter tore her apart. In the perfect example of bad timing, Mars came up under Tiamat just as she is being pulled apart. Several large pieces fell into Mars's northern sea creating some hundred plus mile diameter volcanic vents. Massive amounts of magma poured out and boiled away the sea. Lomonosov and Lyot are remnants of this bombardment. They both show signs of multiple flows.

There is at least one, and perhaps two, large vents at the southeast edge of the Cydonia plane. Lomonosov is thirteen hundred miles north of Cydonia with Lyot about the same distance east and a little north. There are several smaller vents in the northern lowlands adjacent to these major vents. With magma flowing from all these vents for hundreds of years a sea or two could easily be boiled off. On land the impacts created great shield volcanoes such as Olympus Mons, the largest volcano in the solar system.

Nibiru, the destroyer of planets passes in front of Tiamat as it climbed back up out of the solar system pulling several large pieces with it. One of these pieces dropped off to take up a tilted eccentric orbit and becomes known as Pluto.

Behind Nibiru trailed a cloud of debris that rained down on the four outer planets. Some of these took up orbits around the planets and became minor moons. Others fell into the planets. Their clear atmospheres were clouded by the turbulence of the falling remnants of Tiamat. Mars may have picked up one of two chunks of Tiamat. Phobos shows signs of layering. This is an indication of sedimentary or volcanic buildup. One of the asteroids we have pictures of looks like it broke off something. It looks like a broken rock. It is acknowledged as a broken rock. Where it came from is the speculation. I speculate it was Tiamat. They speculate it was a smaller chunk of something. Tiamat was a water world as were Mars and Earth. Venus is a sulfuric acid world. They are representative of the kind of life that might live on Venus, or here on Earth. They form snottites, a microbe that lives in a sulfuric acid bath of its own secretion. These snottites live in deep caves in total darkness. Living with these snottites is a small ecosystem that makes its living by eating the rock and making an ever-bigger cave. There is, of course, running water there.

Liquid water is required for biological life. A star, such as the Sun is very hot. It is so hot that the atoms leaving the surface are missing an electron or three. It takes a while before they calm down enough to get together with other atoms to make molecules. Both Hydrogen and oxygen boil off the Sun. Some of these molecules get together to form water too.

At the other end of the solar system, out in interstellar space, it is very, very cold. Any water molecules that did clump up would be frozen solid. In between these two extremes is a band where there will be liquid water. Any solid objects in this range will collect water. Thus there is a band of liquid water around every star in the universe. Every place on Earth where there is liquid water there is life. The laws of the physical world, physics, chemistry and etc., are uniform throughout the known universe. Thus there is biological life throughout the known universe.

Tiamat was a water world. Some of this water fell on Mars. In one case it was an iceberg that impacted a hardened lava crust over a molten underflow. Even now there is liquid flowing out from under the surface of Mars.

Elsewhere in the solar system Uranus is laying on its side. Venus is upside down. And Pluto not only is almost upside down, its orbit is the most irregular of the known planets.

Pluto shows the signs of being recently captured rather than having been born with the solar system. And finally, from the Book of Enoch the Prophet, Chapter LXIV, Verse 1, I quote, "In those days Noah saw that the earth became inclined, and destruction approached."

The Destruction of Mars

More than any other of the planets in our solar system, human beings have always had a strong emotional attachment to our neighbor in the sky. Our history, our legends and our myths seem to point over and over again to Mars and seemingly tell us that the story of Mars is somehow important to us.

During the past 30 years countless billions of dollars have been spent sending spacecraft to this planet in the hopes of unlocking her many mysteries. In 2004 the President of the United States, whose country is embroiled in a war, is expected to announce a new effort to reach Mars with a manned expedition.

Photos from previous missions to Mars are the subjects of such controversy that entire websites and books have been written about them. The vast majority of photos that have been taken however still remain under lock and key by NASA, JPL, and numerous private contractors who are immune from Freedom of Information Act lawsuits.

In turning back again though to our common myths and legends we learn that Mars was once a sister to Earth and like earth was a living planet. On her surface great civilizations once reigned and great monuments built. And that her demise came as quickly as the blink of an eye.

Though there are many names given for the cause of her destruction we'll simply give it the name in vogue now. Planet X. And as we've already discussed our ancient ancestors gave this planet a name, and named the alien beings associated with it.

And like the destruction of our sister planet Mars, a faction of these aliens have likewise planned for the destruction of Earth. And this story is one you've most likely not heard about either.

The methods they will utilize are from within and without our world. And as world events continue to unfold, more and more will witness the ugliness of the predominance of bullying behavior. You can see it even now in the mass media, how being mean and cruel is becoming acceptable behavior.

The rulers of the stronger nations are forcing their will upon the weaker nations and will become more demanding and unreasonable. Nation states are using an enormously oppressive power much like that of masters over slaves. History is repeating itself, again.

If our myths and legends are true then we have to know that there was once a super race of aliens known to the ancient people of the Earth as the Anunnaki. For many reasons, the Anunnaki have been reduced in power today.

This race of beings thrives on conquest and enslavement of those who are under them. In recent years, there have been many speculative writings about Planet X. As I've mentioned before, most of these writings are based somewhat on Zecharia Sitchin's book, The Twelfth Planet. Sitchin, like Velikovsky and Darwin, used his respective theories to support his claims.

The question we keep asking ourselves is Nibiru real? I personally believe the answer to that is a resounding "Yes". There are those who believe that the Anunnaki of Nibiru are coming back to Earth soon.

Many believe that Planet X is going to pass by Earth, within our lifetime, on its 3,600-year orbit around our sun. Such believers are terrified of the consequences that a close pass by Nibiru might bring. They fear this will cause earthquakes, tidal waves, severe flooding, and food shortages due to climatic conditions, diseases, meteor firestorms, volcanic eruptions and the like. They are afraid that it will result in a great catastrophic infliction of loss of life on Earth.

Our ancestors named Planet X as Nibiru in Sumerian, and Marduk in Babylonian. It has been said that the ancient Mesopotamians believed that Nibiru was the twelfth planet in our solar system and that it was "heaven" where their gods resided and came from. Nibirians, the people of Nibiru, are often referred to as Anunnaki, Nephilim, Elohim (plural for god), and Mardukians. I shall refer to them as Anunnaki as this is what the general population was known as by the Sumerians and by those at the present time.

Remember too, the word "Anunnaki" literally means "those who came from heaven to earth". In the Old Testament these "heavenly" visitors are called "Anakim". Nibiru was populated by a reptilian super race and governed by elite aristocracy known as the "Nefilim" in Hebrew, which means "they who have come down from the heavens to earth". The Anunnaki were one of the many technologically advanced alien races at the time. In fact, their civilization was advanced far beyond most others of their time. The Anunnaki called their home star (sun) "ZAOS". The Anunnaki are a belligerent and conquering race. They are fierce, evil, lustful, incestuous, bloodthirsty, deceitful, jealous and domineering.

They are also carnivorous and are often cannibalistic. They also demand human sacrifices of virgins from those they conquer and from their own kind whom they enslave. If you imagine the worst characteristics you can conceive in Satan, you have well concocted an impression of the Anunnaki. They specialize in mind control. They also nearly perfected economic control with the development of money and the usury system. They have conducted extensive genetic engineering and have genetically engineered among other things, a super reptilian race, which the Anunnaki called the "Ducaz". The Ducaz are used for conquering and controlling the Nibirian population and those of other conquered racess. Thus, the Ducaz are Reptilians.

There are different types of Reptilians amongst them. Their masters, the Anunnaki Elite, are not the Ducaz. Like anything associated with the Anunnaki, there is a rigid, inequitable and regimented class structure amongst the Ducaz. The Reptilians or Ducaz were sent by their "masters", the Nephilim or Elohim to fight in wars with other alien races and to serve as their spies, bodyguards and police force. There are many factions amongst the Anunnaki. One of the most bitter enemies of the Ducaz call themselves the "Pers-sires", a group of aliens called "Vulturites".

They are called Vulturites not because they look like vultures, as some have claimed. In fact, they don't look like that at all! Ironically, the Pers-sires are just a different faction of the Anunnaki race. However, the Ducaz (Reptilians) and the Pers-sires (Vulturites) have always been bitter enemies even to this day.

The descendents of these two groups are now on Earth vying for supremacy of the world. Many of these are currently in political, financial, scientific, religious, legal, medical (especially in blood banks), entertainment, military, agrarian or commercial positions, and also in the sex industry. Most of these aliens are not consciously aware of their alien origins. The Anunnaki are flesh-and-blood, biological beings with abounding pride, arrogance, uncontrollable urges for adult and child sex partners (whether they be willing or forced participants), and they have a great appetite for conquest and control.

This warlike race has an insatiable thirst for control of other beings and dominion over other races, and the less privileged classes of the Anunnaki. The Anunnaki developed and imposed complex, oppressive cast and gender systems. They are misogynists. That was why they eliminated the worship of the Divine Mother of the early people on Earth whom they conquered when they arrived. There was so much resistance to the elimination of the worship of the Divine Mother that the Anunnaki set up replacement "mothers" for various cultures such as the 'earth mother', 'mother nature' and thereafter further corrupted the Divine Mother's image by falsely attributing Her with lustful, vengeful and jealous qualities. The interpretation of Kali is one of those false attributes.

Now, due to the effects of the passage of Planet X, the Earth and the planets and moons of our solar system were severely affected. Nibiru too suffered great damage as a result of this celestial collision. This caused the Anunnaki to come to Earth in search of a permanent home. But did they really come to search for physical gold, as Sitchin hypothesizes? Oddly, gold is not a native mineral to Earth, so the Anunnaki would not be expecting it on Earth. Nor did they come to Earth to mine for gold to make a shield to protect their ailing atmospheric conditions on Nibiru as some myths state.

What appears in space is really the shadow of Nibiru, many light years away. However, the Anunnaki were delighted to find gold on earth because they used it for ornamentation. They also created many slaves to mine the gold, and they used many of the Anunnaki lower classes to do the same.

Since their home, Nibiru was destroyed, the Anunnaki Elite and their cadre of attendants were forced to become transient, and with the majority of them living in a huge spacecraft (like a city) that orbited the Earth. By then, the other Anunnaki races were already placed in different worlds that they had conquered, including Earth, Mars, and the rest of our solar system. They were also interspersed throughout the Orion and the Pleiades systems.

Thus it can be seen that the Anunnaki are extraordinarily powerful and they were feared by many. The Anunnaki Elite and those who were permitted to travel moved from the orbiting spacecraft in smaller shuttlecrafts to visit Earth below. They also sent freighter class crafts to Earth for commercial and military purposes. Inter-planetary slave trade was prevalent and lucrative. It is no wonder that the ancient people feared their gods who they claimed lived in the sky. The majority of the earthlings now are genetically and symbolically part of the off-planet civilization of the Anunnaki. You will see why I say that as the story unfolds. The Anunnaki Elite of Nibiru are genetic manipulators who know how to create artificial life forms. In their arrogance they tried to play God.

Their highly advanced technology and their overbearing size and strength made them nearly invincible in the eyes of the early people. Thus, the Anunnaki Elite were seen and worshiped as gods by them. The Anunnaki Elite have sometimes been referred to as the Nordics or Blondes. They are tall, robust, full of vigor, athletic and usually of fair complexion. Their symbol of status and power is the winged disc that represents their home star ZAOS.

These Anunnaki Elite were later known as Elohim and Nephilim. The Anunnaki Elite (the Nephilim) created many religions so they could be worshiped as gods; this gives them great satisfaction and keeps humans from discovering who they really are. The Anunnaki developed religions by corrupting any spirituality they observed in the indigenous people of the Earth. They employed religions as a powerful means of controlling the indigenous people. Different religions were set up with doctrines in direct opposition to one another in order to breed disharmony, distrust, confusion, war and arrogance.

The Anunnaki planted hybrids from other worlds on Earth when they came. Not long after their arrival, they began to spread themselves as far and as wide as they could and took control of sections of the planet by genetic engineering. They forced the indigenous people out of their own establishments and forced them into total submission. They used the indigenous people for controlled experimentation of biological breeding.

Today, there are aliens who abduct earthlings for cloning and they also mutilate animals. Most of these abductions and assaults are carried out by Anunnaki Remnants (a term I use to indicate those Anunnaki who were stranded on Earth). As mentioned earlier the Anunnaki Elite conquered and enslaved the primitive people who were already residing on Earth. Some claim that Jesus was a hybrid from Nibiru, which maliciously implies that He was an Anunnaki. This is patently false. Jesus is in fact, an Avatar of the Light who "incarnated" here to remind and to re-awaken the "sleeping" human beings of their true

In Genesis 6:2-4 it is recorded by the Anunnaki (who wrote most of the Old Testament) that "the sons of God" (the Anunnaki males) "saw the daughters of men that they were fair". In developing this doctrine, the Anunnaki were trying to show that the "sons of God" were lured to Earth and corrupted by the indigenous women of Earth. In fact, the women of Earth at that time were purer than the males and the males revered them because the earthlings' spirituality still retained closeness to the earth Mother.

The Anunnaki had to twist this to make it appear that women were a gender that could not be trusted and that they must be oppressed by the males. The "sons of God" abused and horribly mistreated the indigenous women of the Earth to set the example of a misogynistic model for the indigenous men of the Earth to follow. It was very critical to the plans of the Anunnaki to switch the gender of God from Mother to Father. Anunnaki chauvinism has caused women to be subjugated to men and treated as their "footstools" in many cultures including the Arab, Asian, Jewish and Western societies. In Isaiah 66:1 is found the saying "Thus saith the Lord, The heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool..."

In Ephesians 5:22-24 Paul, who was an incarnated Anunnaki, wrote: "Wives submit yourselves onto your husbands, as onto the Lord. For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church: and he is the savior of the body. Therefore, as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in every thing".

Therefore according to the teaching of Paul, the wives are the footstools and the husbands are the thrones. In one usurping stroke, Paul, on behalf of the Anunnaki, subordinated all Christian women to an inferior status.

Many churches equate the teaching of Paul to the teachings of Christ. This is blasphemy! As evidence that the Anunnaki authored much of the Old Testament and also corrupted it, let us consider how they have manipulated the writings of Moses. In Exodus 24:7 is found a passage telling the people that they must "be obedient" to the blood sacrifice. Further, in Numbers 27:20, Moses was supposed to have said that the people must "be obedient" to Joshua. Again in Deuteronomy 4:30 Moses supposedly commanded his people to "be obedient" to God's voice in the tribulations and the latter days.

Yet again, the Anunnaki purposely corrupted the sayings of Moses in Deuteronomy 8:20, where one is told that one must "be obedient" to God or: "As the nations which the Lord destroyth before your face, so shall ye perish; because ye would not be obedient unto the voice of the Lord your God".

These cannot be the words of the true God of Love. These are the words of the Demiurge's chief agents - the Anunnaki. The true God does not punish people or nations or any thing. The only other time that the words "be obedient" appear in the Old Testament is in 2 Samuel 22:25 where it is found that "Strangers shall submit themselves unto me: as soon as they hear, they shall be obedient unto me".

Clearly, these are the words of the slave masters, the Anunnaki. There are only three other occasions where the words "be obedient" appear in the Bible, and all these are attributed to Paul, the Anunnaki. In 2 Corinthians 2:9 Paul directs his (Paul's NOT Jesus') followers to be obedient in all things. Ephesians 6:5 reads: "Servants, be obedient to them that are your masters according to the flesh, with fear and trembling and singleness of your heart, as unto Christ". Is not this awful? The last time the words "be obedient" appear in the Christian Bible is in Titus 2:9 where Paul says, "Exhort servants to be obedient unto their own masters, and to please them well in all things..." Clearly, Paul was a representative for a god of terror and a slave master's henchman. As can be seen by the example; of the quote "be obedient" it can be seen that Jesus tried to undo the teachings of the Anunnaki in the Old Testament but Paul corrupted Jesus' teachings and in so doing, returned the "god" of fear and terror to power. The creation myths throughout the world are similar in their major thrusts.

Why is this so? This is because the various creation myths were spread by the Anunnaki as they migrated around the world. These religions set up by the Anunnaki to control and manipulate the populations incorporated the various creation myths. These religions are not based upon love, they are based upon fear. Wherever the Anunnaki went and conquered, they consolidated the people into densely populated communities so they could better force the people to work for them and to control them -physically, emotionally, mentally, spiritually and economically - as slaves.

They control by instilling fear and keeping the people ignorant These patterns still exist today. However, they are subtler and often appear more attractive today than they did in the past Thus in this sense, humans were slaves to the Anunnaki before, and they remain so today.

The Anunnaki introduced the adornment of the body with jewelry. They also promoted very expensive tastes that would force people into economic slavery. They introduced polygamy, homosexuality, incest and pedophilia, which are hallmarks of the Anunnaki. Such traits are noted in various cultures, including the ancient Egyptian royalty and the patriarchs of the Old Testament who followed the precepts ordered by the Anunnaki.

In many senses, we in this technologically advanced age, are slaves to the modern commodities, governments, economic systems, cultures, religions, customs, mores and etc. But most importantly we are slaves to this Virtual Reality, blinded by its subtleties and falsehoods and its simulation of the Divine Realms.

The Anunnaki first visited the Earth about 500,000 years ago. By then, they had already conquered the Pleiades and Mars and many other worlds. After some trials, the first wave of successful genetic engineering occurred on Earth about 300,000 years ago. The Anunnaki introduced many alien races that they had conquered and implanted them on Earth. They also kidnapped a special race called the Race of Women and brought them to Earth.

This race of women suffered greatly under the suppression and abuse of the Anunnaki. Various alien races from other worlds were brought to Earth to be used as slaves by the Anunnaki Elite. They also kidnapped aliens from other worlds and brought them here as slaves. Some were sold for hard labor, some for sex, some for soldiering and etc.

Through genetic engineering, women were made physically inferior to men in stature, strength and speed. Even in occupations where strength and speed are irrelevant, such as in the clergy, law, medicine, politics, commerce, science, etc., women are greatly disadvantaged and obstructed from participating even up to this day. This shows the extent of the chauvinistic influence of the Anunnaki.

And apart from genetic engineering on humans, there was also similar work carried out on various species including the birds reptiles, fish, beasts and plants. The Anunnaki also practice bestiality. They created monstrosities, some of which are legendary, some were half-animal, half-human, and others were half-bird or half-fish and half-human. The Genesis story was created and recorded by the civilization that was re-started by the Anunnaki. The Sumerians were amongst the earliest ones to possess recordings on tablets describing the history of the Anunnaki on Earth which was in accordance to what the Anunnaki dictated.

About 35,000 years ago, the Cro-Magnon man took over the Earth from the Neanderthal man. The Anunnaki Elite murdered the entire Neanderthal population after they had finished using the Neanderthals as specimens for genetic experiments. Homo sapiens were the result of the second wave of genetic engineering. This second wave allowed the Homo sapiens to procreate with the civilian Anunnaki.

As time went by things got out of control, with monstrosities abounding and many half-human half-beasts were running amok. In the heyday of Atlantis, there was space travel for the privileged classes. Teleportation was also common in those days for the privileged classes. As the Atlantean "slaves became more and more advanced, they began to disobey their "gods", the Anunnaki Elite. This concerned their masters. Thus a decision was made by them to destroy Atlantis. Some of the Anunnaki Elite and their chosen attendants fled the Earth in huge space crafts and went to other planets, such as Mars, and even to other systems. Most of the Anunnaki were left behind. Upon fleeing the Earth, the Anunnaki Elite blew up Atlantis and destroyed it, hoping to kill all of the remaining Anunnaki and the rest of the inhabitants.

However, some of the Anunnaki slaves discovered the plans of the Anunnaki Elite to destroy Atlantis. Some of these slaves were able to escape before the destruction, taking with them some of the knowledge, artifacts, technology, writings, weapons and culture of Atlantis to various parts of the Earth. Another reason the Anunnaki Elite decided to blow up Atlantis was because they were under extreme pressure from the investigation of the Attas (the Amoebic Rescuers of the Light who are like space-patrol).

The Anunnaki Remnants who escaped Atlantis began constructing cultures which we now know as Aztec, Inca, Mayan, and most importantly the ancient Egyptian. There are many Anunnaki on planet Earth today. Some are the descendents of the survivors from Atlantis who escaped before it was blown up. After the destruction of Atlantis, the third wave of genetic engineering performed by the higher classed Anunnaki Remnants took place about 20,000 years ago. One group of Anunnaki Remnants built the pyramids by employing massive amounts of forced human labor and advanced technology. These sites were used as launching pads for spacecraft for the privileged classes of the Anunnaki Remnants. The early Egyptians who built the great pyramids and the Sphinx were also Anunnaki Remnants from Atlantis whom the Anunnaki Elite had intended to annihilate when they destroyed Atlantis. When they returned to Earth after destroying Atlantis, they saw Anunnaki Remnants' cultures.

The Anunnaki Elite usually appointed the rulers and kings of various cultures. And when the Anunnaki Elite fled and the Anunnaki Remnants took over, the Remnants adopted this pattern of appointing kingships. This is why many cultures, including the Chinese, Japanese, Egyptian and Western European followed the order of the divine right of kings.

Thousands of years ago, when the Anunnaki Elite returned to Earth planning to re-start their dominion on Earth, they were surprised to find the Anunnaki Remnant cultures blossoming. This concerned them greatly as they thought they were losing control of the Earth to their former slaves. In desperation, the Anunnaki Elite set upon re-taking control of the Earth. They did this by causing a deluge, which catastrophically destroyed almost all evidence of the former cultures. Only the huge monuments such as the Sphinx, the pyramids, the Ziggurats, etc survived the flood.

Nearly all the huge monuments around the world were created at the behest of the Anunnaki Elite or later, the Anunnaki Remnants. Fearful that there would be Anunnaki Remnants left after the deluge who could rapidly re-construct the culture, especially in Egypt, the Anunnaki Elite took the tremendous risk of selecting an area of the Earth onto which they could instantaneously deposit a culture that would be far superior to that of any tribe on Earth.

There were battles among the various groups for supremacy, but the Anunnaki Elite were too powerful for them. The Sumerian tablets record events of so-called origins of man and creation that were really events of the beginning of the Anunnaki Elite's latest colonization of the Earth.

The conquerors themselves wrote the tablets. Thus, what was recorded on the tablets by the Sumerians dictated by their so-called gods, was self-serving. Through past experience, the Anunnaki had seen how religions could control the populations of various worlds. This is an important tool that they use for control.

The Old Testament is dedicated to Yahweh. It is very male orientated because the Anunnaki were extremely upset with Mother Goddess worship and wanted to eliminate any mention of Her. The Old Testament acknowledges the presence of many Anunnaki "gods" on Earth in early times. The Genesis story is about the spread of humankind through generations following Adam and Eve and the story of the "divine's" disenchantment with humankind that preceded the deluge.

In the Sumerian texts there was mention of the people of the Shem (meaning spaceship). The Anunnaki were the people of the Shem, and they came down to Earth and copulated with primitive earthlings. This is recorded in the Genesis story. The Anunnaki Elite also started a new, highly advanced culture in Babylon. As always, they destroy cultures and murder the populations whenever they get out of hand, then they re-start elsewhere.

Today the Anunnaki Remnants are planning to re-establish the "majesty" of bygone days when the Anunnaki Elite had a complete tyranny over the Earth. They plan to re-start the world again. The Anunnaki Remnants, with the help of humans as well as the incarnated Anunnaki in human bodies, have built massive underground bunkers and railway lines that are a part of their structure for allowing them and their cadre of attendants to survive the catastrophes that they believe the fugitive Anunnaki Elite are planning for the Earth.

They cannot leave the planet in spacecrafts because they were left with limited resources after the Anunnaki Elite escaped with all of the technologically advanced spacecrafts. The Anunnaki Remnants think that they can select their own chosen ones (like their masters did) and take refuge with them in underground bunkers during the period of catastrophes. They plan to take a whole garrison of "slaves" underground. These will include soldiers, police, fire fighters, cooks, entertainers, beauticians doctors, scientists, etc.

In the aftermath, they will use them on the surface, as before. Most importantly, they will use their own new breed of clones to populate the Earth. The Earth population is being programmed to accept this underground scenario as can be seen in movies like Deep Impact. These Anunnaki think that their masters, the Anunnaki Elite, will be returning as before, and they also think that they will have pleased them with the way that they have influenced the Earth.

But the Anunnaki Remnants' plan has been thwarted. Their evil desire to destroy much of the life and the culture on the surface of the Earth will fail. In the aftermath, they expect to find the Earth inhabited with only a relatively few survivors whom they would easily subdue with the weapons, technology and military forces that they secured underground during the catastrophes.

They hope their masters will restart all cultures with themselves deified and served by the people they plan to enslave. The ones chosen to continue in their new civilization are humans and clones who have specially chose characteristics for blind obedience. They think their masters will once again be the literal gods of the world. The Anunnaki Remnants are now amongst us. They are our current puppet masters who manipulate and control the world.

At present, the cloning of humans, animals and plants are common activities with these aliens in our midst. The general public does not know about this diabolical scheme, and the world leaders and their minions will vehemently deny it. Thus for a long, long time the Earth has been a planet run by slavers!

The Anunnaki on Earth are awaiting reinforcements from their masters, the Anunnaki Elite who escaped temporarily to other solar systems when the Attas were after them. However, the reinforcements will not be coming to Earth this time because the Attas have restricted their reinforcements, so the existing Anunnaki on Earth are stuck.

The Sun Cruisers that have been detected recently are part of The Rescue Team from the Light. They are not of Eridanean origin as has been speculated by some. The Sun Cruisers are on standby because the Light anticipates that the Anunnaki Elite will attempt to return to the Earth to cause all manner of catastrophes, and to re-supply the Anunnaki Remnants.

However, should any Anunnaki Elite attempt to come to Earth, they will encounter invincible forces from the Light. The clearing of the planet confuses the Anunnaki Remnants by such means as global warming, volcanoes, fires, wars and etc. They thought that these are the signs of the return of the Anunnaki Elite to Earth.

However, they are now beginning to suspect their masters cannot get through the Light's security and so the Anunnaki Remnants are becoming terrified to the point that world leaders are now irrational. Already there are those who are so deluded by the programming of the Anunnaki Remnants that they are saying things like "this Earth is a prison but it can be turned into a paradise".

The Anunnaki have incarnated in human forms. Some are also in the astral. The Anunnaki have great influence over the astral world also. Many messages channeled today are deceitful messages from the Anunnaki. The Light has waited for this very time to perform Its Final Rescue of all the Viable beings of Light from all levels and from all types of consciousness who are trapped in this evil dimension and return earth and its human beings to their own.

But is this true?

Now, the reason I'm relating this story is because it's a part of who and what we are, it's our past. And like most things human, it seemingly contradicts already established thought patterns we hold about who and what we are. And, as you read on you're going to see how much more strange this world is than you have been led to believe it is, but also how even the most contradictory facts can be turned into normal logic.

We Know the Truth; Reagan Gasps

"In our obsession with antagonisms of the moment, we often forget how much unites all the members of humanity. Perhaps we need some outside, universal threat to make us recognize this common bond." President Ronald Reagan, in a speech to the Forty-second Session of the United Nations on September 21, 1987.

Supermarket tabloids, that strange breed of sensationalistic American journalism, have been talking for most of the decade about Ronald Reagan's fascination with things like astrology and space aliens. Little attention was paid to the matter ... after all, the stuff was printed in the tabloids and nobody sane is supposed to believe in them. Yet truth is becoming stranger than fiction in the case of Ronald Wilson Reagan and some of his more curious remarks.

For starters, he was the first President of the United States to talk about the possibility of an alien invasion from outer space, and he has done so not once or twice but in three speeches. Reagan is also the only President who admitted, in a 1984 Presidential debate against Walter Mondale to having "philosophical discussions" about Armageddon in the White House with some rather well known fundamentalist preachers.

And then there was the explosion about astrology in the White House, triggered by Don Regan's disclosures that Nancy had often consulted astrologers to arrange for appointments with the President. Everyone knows the details by now, and when asked to comment, Marcello Galluppi, a well-known astrologer and host of a psychic radio and TV talk show in Detroit, stated; "It is very clear to me that the politicians in Washington have their psychics and astrologers," he stated, "at least some of them do." Furthermore, continued Marcello, there is evidence that the Reagans have used astrology for a long time if we consider that "he was sworn in at midnight as Governor of California, based on astrology."

The media was having a field day with horoscopes at the White House when Reagan talked about the possibility of Earth uniting against a threat by "a power from outer space." Although the idea wasn't new for the President, as we shall soon see, this time everybody paid attention. More as a joke than a serious thought, however. The AP story on the speech, for example, had the headline, "Reagan follows astrological flap with comment on space invaders."

There might be a deeper reason for Reagan's apparent interest in the idea of an alien threat. There is an unconfirmed story that before he became Governor of California, Ron and Nancy had a UFO sighting on a highway near Hollywood. The story was broadcast in February, 1980, on Steve Alien's radio show over WNEW-AM in New York. The comedian and host commented that a very well known personality in the entertainment industry had confided to him that many years ago, Ron and Nancy were expected to a casual dinner with friends in Hollywood. Except for the Reagans, all the guests had arrived. Ron and Nancy showed up quite upset half an hour later, saying that they had just seen a UFO coming down the coast. Steve Alien released no further details.

The President first disclosed his recurrent thoughts about "an alien threat" during a December 4, 1985, speech at the Fallston High School in Maryland, where he spoke about his first summit with General Secretary Gorbachev in Geneva. According to a White House transcript, Reagan remarked that during his 5-hour private discussions with Gorbachev, he told [Gorbachev] to think, "how easy his task and mine might be in these meetings that we held if suddenly there was a threat to this world from some other species from another planet outside in the universe. We'd forget all the little local differences that we have between our countries..."

Except for one headline or two, people didn't pay much attention. Not then and not later, when Gorbachev himself confirmed the conversation in Geneva during an important speech on February 17, 1987, in the Grand Kremlin Palace in Moscow, to the Central Committee of the USSR's Communist Party. Not a High School in Maryland, precisely! There, buried on page 7A of the 'Soviet Life Supplement,' was the following statement:

"At our meeting in Geneva, the U.S. President said that if the earth faced an invasion by Extraterrestrials, the United States and the Soviet Union would join forces to repel such an invasion. I shall not dispute the hypothesis, though I think it's early yet to worry about such an intrusion..." Notice that Gorbachev doesn't say this is an incredible proposition, he just says that it's too early to worry about it.

If Gorbachev elevated the theme from a high school to the I Kremlin, Reagan upped the stakes again by including the "alien [threat]", again, not in a domestic speech but to a full session of the General Assembly of the United Nations. Towards the end of his speech to the Forty-second Session on September 21, 1987, the President said that, "in our obsession with antagonisms of the moment, we often forget how much unites all the members of humanity. Perhaps we need some outside, universal threat to make us recognize this common bond."

"I occasionally think," continued Reagan, "how quickly our differences worldwide would vanish if we were facing an alien threat from outside this world. And yet, I ask" - here comes the clincher - "is not an alien force ALREADY among us?"

The President then tried to retreat from the last bold statement by posing a second question: "What could be more alien to the universal aspirations of our peoples than war and the threat of war?" Unlike the off-the-cuff remarks to the Fallston High School, we must assume that the President's speech to the General Assembly was written very carefully and likewise, it merits close examination. Ronald Reagan had stated in the past that he thought often about this issue, yet nobody seemed to be paying attention.

When the President mentioned in Chicago for the third time the possibility of a threat by "a power from another planet," the media quickly dubbed it the "space invaders" speech, relegating it to a sidebar in the astrology flap. The ET remark was made in the Q&A period following a speech to the National Strategy Forum in Chicago's Palmer House Hotel, where he adopted a more conciliatory tone towards the Soviet Union. Significantly, Reagan's remark was made during his response to the question, "What do you consider to be the most important need in international relations?"

"I've often wondered," the President told us once again, "what if all of us in the world discovered that we were threatened by an outer — a power from outer space, from another planet." And then he emphasized his theme that this would erase all the differences, and that the "citizens of the world" would "come together to fight that particular threat..."

There is a fourth, unofficial, similar statement from Ronald Reagan about this particular subject as Senior editor Free Bames reported it in the New Republic magazine. The article described a luncheon in the White House between the President and Eduard Shevardnadze, during the Soviet Foreign Minister's visit to Washington to sign the INF Treaty on September 15 1987. "Near the end of his lunch with Shevardnadze," wrote Bames, "Reagan wondered aloud what would happen if the world faced an 'alien threat' from outer space. 'Don't you think the United States and the Soviet Union would be together?' he asked. Shevardnadze said yes, absolutely. "And we wouldn't need our defense ministers to meet," he added."

The fact that there are so many references in important speeches, off-the-cuff remarks, and just plain conversations means that, for whatever reason or knowledge about deep UFO secrets that he may have had as President, Ronald Reagan did think often about the possibility of an alien invasion, and how this event could become a catalyst for world unity.

Talking about these UFO secrets, there is also an unconfirmed story of a special screening in the White House of the movie "ET", with director Steven Spielberg and a few selected guests. Right after the movie, Reagan supposedly turned to Spielberg and whispered something to the effect, "There are only a handful of people who know the truth about this."

Indeed, more than one ufologist had suggested that the real target behind "Star Wars", one of Reagan's vital priorities, was the projected ET invasion and not one from the Soviet Union.

Aside from these remarks of the former President, Reagan is also remembered for the events of March 30, 1981. President Reagan was shot and gravely wounded by a lone gunman, John Hinckley, Jr. Though Reagan recovered fully, his press secretary, Jim Brady, who was wounded in the head, has remained partially paralyzed to this day. Hinckley was committed to a mental institution, and has recently been freed on unrestricted visits to his parent's home.

Everyone alive will remember that horrific day when it seemed we were going to lose another beloved President. As the shock wave of the event raced across the country the then Vice President, George Bush reassured the nation that no conspiracy was involved, that only a lone crazed gunman was involved, and all would be well. What was incredible however was that Vice President Bush made this announcement before any federal agency had investigated the attempt on the Presidents life.

Now it doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure out that the person most likely to gain from the death of a President would be the Vice President. But was there a connection between the attempted assassin and the Vice President?

Apparently there was!

Bush Son Had Dinner Plans With Hinckley Brother Before Shooting

The Associated Press Domestic News

March 31, 1981, Tuesday, PM cycle

HOUSTON

The family of the man charged with trying to assassinate President Reagan is acquainted with the family of Vice President George Bush and had made large contributions to his political campaign, the Houston Post reported today.

Scott Hinckley, brother of John W. Hinckley Jr., who allegedly shot Reagan, was to have dined tonight in Denver at the home of Neil Bush, one of the vice president's sons.

Neil Bush

The newspaper said in a copyright story, Scott Hinckley, brother of John W. Hinckley Jr., who allegedly shot Reagan, was to have dined tonight in Denver at the home of Neil Bush, one of the vice president's sons. The newspaper said it was unable to reach Scott Hinckley, vice president of his father's Denver-based firm, Vanderbilt Energy Corp., for comment. Neil Bush lives in Denver, where he works for Standard Oil Co. of Indiana.

In 1978, Neil served as campaign manager for his brother, George W. Bush, the vice president's oldest son, who made an unsuccessful bid for Congress. Neil lived in Lubbock throughout much of 1978, where John Hinckley lived from 1974 through 1980.

On Monday, Neil Bush said he did not know if he had ever met 25-year-old John Hinckley.

"From what I know and I've heard, they (the Hinckleys) are a very nice family and have given a lot of money to the Bush campaign."

SHARON BUSH

"I have no idea," he said. "I don't recognize any pictures of him. I just wish I could see a better picture of him." Sharon Bush, Neil's wife, said Scott Hinckley was coming to their house as a date of a girlfriend of hers. "I don't even know the brother. From what I know and I've heard, they (the Hinckleys) are a very nice family and have given a lot of money to the Bush campaign. I understand he was just the renegade brother in the family. They must feel awful," she said.

The dinner was canceled, she added.

George W. Bush said he was unsure whether he had met John W. Hinckley.

The significance to all of this information isn't apparent to you yet, I know that. But any story, and this is mine don't forget, is like a puzzle, with the words being put together like the pieces So let's continue; this gets stranger I assure you!

Good Deeds Don't Go Unpunished

Perhaps the greatest crime of the last century was the murder of Pope John Paul I, the predecessor of the current Pope, John Paul II. But before attempting to understand the death of John Paul I we first have to understand the three Prophecies of Fatima.

The Virgin Mary, the Mother of God, appeared six times to three shepherd children near the town of Fatima, Portugal between May 13th and October 13th, 1917. Appearing to the children, the Blessed Virgin told them that She had been sent by God with a message for every man, woman and child living in the last century. Coming at a time when civilization was torn apart by war and bloody violence. She promised that Heaven would grant peace to the entire world if Her requests for prayer, reparation and consecration were heard and obeyed.

Our Lady of Fatima explained to the children that war is a punishment for sin and warned that God would further castigate the world for its disobedience to His Will by means of war, hunger and the persecution of the Church, the Holy Father and the Catholic Faithful. God's Mother prophesized that Russia would be God's chosen "instrument of chastisement," spreading the "errors" of atheism and materialism across the earth, fomenting wars, annihilating nations and persecuting the Faithful everywhere.

In all Her appearances at Fatima, the Blessed Mother repeatedly emphasized the necessity of praying the Rosary daily, of wearing the Brown Scapular of Mount Carmel and of performing acts of reparation and sacrifice. To prevent the terrible chastisement at the hands of Russia and to convert "that poor nation". Our Lady requested the solemn public Consecration of Russia to Her Immaculate Heart by the Pope and all the Catholic bishops of the world,

She also asked that the Faithful practice a new devotion of reparation on the first Saturday of five consecutive months ("the Five First Saturdays"). The heart of Our Lady's Message to the world is contained in what has come to be called the "Secret" which She confided to the three child seers in July 1917.

The Secret actually consists of three parts, the first two of which have been publicly revealed. The first part of the Secret was a horrifying vision of hell "where the souls of poor sinners go" and contained an urgent plea from Our Lady for acts of prayer and sacrifice to save souls. The second part of the Secret specifically prophesized the outbreak of World War II and contained the Mother of God's solemn request for the Consecration of Russia as a condition of world peace. It also predicted the inevitable triumph of Her Immaculate Heart following Russia's consecration and the conversion "of that poor nation" to the Catholic Faith.

The last part of the Secret (often called the "Third Secret") was written down by Lucy DOS Santos, the last living Fatima seer, in 1944 and has been in the possession of the Holy See since 1957. Most informed sources speculate that this portion of the Secret concerns chaos in the Catholic Church, predicting widespread apostasy and a loss of faith beginning in the seventh decade (1970's) of the 20th century.

Though instructed by the Blessed Mother to release the third secret in 1960 the Vatican failed to do so and offered no explanation for their doing so. When Pope John Paul II finally did release what he claimed was the third secret he also imposed a strict ban on anyone having access to the last surviving Fatima seer, which remains in effect to this very day.

But listen to the Pope from this article in the German magazine "Stimme des Glaubens," which published the following account of Pope John Paul II's interview, with a small group of German Catholics, on the occasion of his visit to Fuida, in November of 1980.

Question: "Holy Father, what has become of the 3rd Secret of Fatima? According to Our Lady's instructions, wasn't it supposed to be revealed in 1960? And what will happen in the Church?"

John Paul II: "Because of the seriousness of its contents, in order not to encourage the world wide power of Communism to carry out certain coups, my Predecessors in the Chair of Peter have diplomatically preferred to withhold its publication. On the other hand, it should be sufficient for all Christians to know this much: if there is a message in which it is said that the oceans will flood entire sections of the earth; that, from one moment to the other, millions of people will perish...there is no longer any point in really wanting to publish this secret message. Many want to know merely out of curiosity, or because of their taste for sensationalism, but they forget that 'to know' implies for them a responsibility. It is dangerous to want to satisfy one's curiosity only, if one is convinced that we can do nothing against a catastrophe that has been predicted."

At this point, the Holy Father took hold of his Rosary and said: "Here is the remedy against the evil! Pray, pray and ask for nothing else. Put everything in the hands of the Mother of God!"

Then he went on to say: "We must be prepared to undergo great trials in the not-to-distant future; trials that will require us to be ready to give up even our lives, and a total gift of self to Christ and for Christ. Through your prayers and mine, it is possible to alleviate this tribulation, but it is no longer possible to avert it, because it is only in this way that the Church can be effectively renewed. How many times, indeed, has the renewal of the Church been effected in blood? This time, again, it will not be otherwise. We must be strong, we must prepare ourselves, we must entrust ourselves to Christ and to His holy Mother, and we must be -attentive, very attentive, to the prayer of the Rosary.

" Pope John Paul I however, and as soon as he had read the third secret, reportedly shook with horror. It was his 32nd day as the Holy Father, he had one more day to live! Though the reasons and cause for his death are still the matter of much dispute there is one undeniable fact.

The afternoon prior to his mysterious death John Paul I announced through the Vatican press office that the following day he was going to address the world on matter "...of utmost importance to all humanity."

After almost three years of research, David Yallop wrote, in his book, "In God's Name" (1984), that the precise circumstances attending the discovery of the body of John Paul I "eloquently demonstrate that the Vatican practiced a disinformation campaign." The Vatican told one lie after another: "Lies about little things, lies about big things. All these lies had but one purpose: to disguise the fact that Albino Luciani, Pope John Paul I, had been assassinated."

Sister Vicenza found the Holy Father dead at approximately 4:45 a.m. on September 29, 1978 and was forced to keep silent by the Secretariat of State, Cardinal Villot, who imposed a vow of silence upon her to cover-up the whole affair. The secretaries were likewise forbidden to advise anyone of the events without Cardinal Villot's authorization. A trustworthy person conveyed to Fr. Saez personally that Sister Vicenza had said, "But the world must know the truth."

Sister Vicenza gave two conflicting reports concerning the state that she first found Pope John Paul I. According to her breathless words to a group of French priests that same morning, it was "in his bathroom" that she had "found him dead." Yet another report (no doubt arranged by Cardinal Villot) says that Sister Vicenza entered the room and found the Pope sitting up in bed, "with an expression of agony" before he died. This discrepancy is very important: if it was determined that Sister Vicenza found the Holy Father dead in the bathroom, still in his papal robes, this would indicate that Pope John Paul I died shortly after his "toast" with Cardinal Villot the night of September 28, 1978.

David Yallop reconstructs the actions of Cardinal Villot and paints a very suspicious portrait. It is reported that at 5:00 a.m. Cardinal Villot confirmed the Holy Father's death. The Pope's glasses, slippers, and will disappeared, "none of these items has ever been seen again". Speculation is that there may have been vomit on the slippers, which if examined would identify poison as the cause of death.

Cardinal Villot, or an aide, telephoned the embalmers and a Vatican car was sent to fetch them. Incredibly, the car was at their door at 5:00 a.m.! What ensued in the following hour is still a mystery.

It was not until 6:00 a.m. that Dr. Buzzonati, not Professor Fontana, the head of the Vatican medical service, arrived and confirmed the death, without drawing up a death certificate. Dr. Buzzonati attributed the death to acute myocardial infarction, heart attack.

At about 6:30 a.m. Villot began to inform the cardinals, an hour and a half after the embalmers had arrived! Yallop notes that, for Cardinal Villot, the embalmers took precedence over the cardinals and the head of the Vatican medical service.

By 6 p.m. that evening, the Papal Apartments had been entirely polished and washed. Yallop writes that the secretaries packed up and carried away the Pope's clothes, "including his letters, notes, books and a small handful of personal mementos.... By 6:00 p.m., the entire 19 rooms of the Papal Apartments were totally bereft of anything remotely associated with the Papacy of Luciani."

Villot arranged for the embalming to be performed that evening, a procedure as unusual as it was illegal. Why the rush? It is also reported that during the embalming it was insisted that no blood was to be drained from the body, and neither were any of the organs to be removed. Yallop notes that "a small quantity of blood would of course have been more than sufficient for a forensic scientist to establish the presence of any poisonous substances."

The Planning Begins: A Great Man Dies

No conversation on the subject of the third secret of Fatima would be complete without you being aware that the death of John Paul I death was not the first having to do with whatever the message of the third secret of Fatima contained, his was the second, the first was the President of The United States, John F. Kennedy.

Early in 1962 emissaries of the Vatican on behalf of the current Pope, JOHN XXIII who requested an 'urgent' meeting, approached President Kennedy. President Kennedy mindful of his recent election and accusations that he as President would be beholden to the Pope because of his Catholic faith turned down the request but asked for, and received Papal permission for his wife, Jacquelyn to attend in his place.

On March 11, 1962 Mrs. Kennedy had a two-hour private meeting with Pope John XXIII, and as reported by her aides at the time, appeared "greatly shaken." What was talked about is still to this day a secret but rumors persist that the ailing Pope, who would last little more than a year, confided to Mrs. Kennedy the third secret of Fatima. (Remember too that John XXIII was to have released to the world the contents of the third secret to the world in 1960.)

Upon her return to Washington DC Mrs. Kennedy informed her husband, the President, about the message, and again what exactly was said remains a secret.

However, immediately after talking with his wife, and in the months to follow, President Kennedy began making sweeping changes to the entire structure of the United States government by issuing a stream of Executive Decisions, to include:

In 1962:

10997 - Assigning Emergency Preparedness Functions to the Secretary of the Interior 10998 - Assigning Emergency Preparedness Functions to the Secretary of Agriculture

10999 - Assigning Emergency Preparedness Functions to the Secretary of Commerce

11000 - Assigning Emergency Preparedness Functions to the Secretary of Labor

11001 - Assigning Emergency Preparedness Functions to the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare 11002 - Assigning Emergency Preparedness Functions to the Postmaster General

11003 - Assigning Emergency Preparedness Functions to the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Agency

11004 - Assigning Emergency Preparedness Functions to the Housing and Home Finance Administrator

11005 - Assigning Emergency Preparedness Functions to the Interstate Commerce Commission

In 1963:

11087 - Assigning Emergency Preparedness Functions to the Secretary of State

11088 - Assigning Emergency Preparedness Functions to the Secretary of the Treasury

11089 - Assigning Emergency Preparedness Functions to the Atomic Energy Commission

11090 - Assigning Emergency Preparedness Functions to the Civil Aeronautics Board

11091 - Assigning Emergency Preparedness Functions to the Civil Service Commission

11092 - Assigning Emergency Preparedness Functions to the Federal Communications Commission

11093 - Assigning Emergency Preparedness Functions to the Administrator of General Services

11094 - Assigning Emergency Preparedness Functions to the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the Farm Credit Administration, the Export-Import Bank of Washington, the Board of Directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Administrator of the Small Business Administration, the Administrator of Veterans Affairs

11095 - Assigning Emergency Preparedness Functions to the Board of Directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Railroad Retirement Board, the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Federal Power Commission, the Director of the National Science Foundation And aside from these vast and sweeping reforms to the government, President Kennedy also issued Federal Reserve and Executive Order 11110, which could be one of the very reasons he was killed.

Executive Order 11,110

AMENDMENT OF EXECUTIVE ORDER NO. 10289 AS AMENDED, RELATING TO THE PERFORMANCE OF CERTAIN FUNCTIONS AFFECTING THE DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY By virtue of the authority vested in me by section 301 of title 3 of the United States Code, it is ordered as follows: Section 1. Executive Order No. 10289 of September 19, 1951, as amended, is hereby further amended-

- a. By adding at the end of paragraph 1 thereof the following subparagraph (j):
 - (j) The authority vested in the President by paragraph (b) of section 43 of the Act of May 12, 1933, as amended (31 U.S.C.821(b)), to issue silver certificates against any silver bullion, silver, or standard silver dollars in the Treasury not then held for redemption of any outstanding silver certificates, to prescribe the denomination of such silver certificates, and to coin standard silver dollars and subsidiary silver currency for their redemption and—
 - b. By revoking subparagraphs (b) and (c) of paragraph 2 thereof.
- Sec. 2. The amendments made by this Order shall not affect any act done, or any right accruing or accrued or any suit or proceeding had or commenced in any civil or criminal cause prior to the date of this Order but all such liabilities shall continue and may be enforced as if said amendments had not been made.

John F. Kennedy
The White House,
June 4, 1963.

On June 4, 1963, President Kennedy made his attempt to strip the Federal Reserve Bank of its power to loan money to the government at interest. On the day President John F. Kennedy signed Executive Order No. 11110, that returned to the U.S. government the power to issue currency, without going through the Federal Reserve.

President Kennedy's order gave the Treasury the power "to issue silver certificates against any silver bullion, silver, or standard silver dollars in the Treasury." This meant that for every ounce of silver in the U.S. Treasury's vault, the government could introduce new money into circulation. In all, President Kennedy brought nearly $4.3 billion in U.S. notes into circulation. The ramifications of this bill were enormous.

With the stroke of a pen, President Kennedy was on his way to putting the Federal Reserve Bank of New York out of business. If enough of these silver certificates were to come into circulation they would have eliminated the demand for Federal Reserve notes. This is because the silver certificates are backed by silver and the Federal Reserve notes are not backed by anything. Executive Order 11110 could have prevented the national debt from reaching its current level, because it would have given the government the ability to repay its debt without going to the Federal Reserve and being charged interest in order to create the new money. Executive Order 11110 gave the U.S. the ability to create its own money backed by silver.

After President Kennedy was assassinated just five months later, no more silver certificates were issued. This Executive Order was never repealed by any U.S. President through an Executive Order and is still valid. Why then has no president utilized it?

Virtually all of the nearly $6 trillion in debt has been created since 1963, and if a U.S. president had utilized Executive Order 11110 the debt would be nowhere near the current level. Perhaps the assassination of JFK was a warning to future presidents who would think to eliminate the U.S. debt by eliminating the Federal Reserve's control over the creation of money.

Mr. Kennedy challenged the government of money by challenging the two most successful vehicles that have ever been used to drive up debt - war and the creation of money by privately owned central bank. As America's debt reached unbearable levels and a conflict continues in Iraq that will further increase America's debt, one is forced to ask, will President Bush utilize Executive Order 11110 and, if so, is he willing to pay the ultimate price for doing so? Or! Is something else going on?

Well, with the sweeping changes President Kennedy made to the Federal Government, and its new organizational structure made to ensure the continuation of the government in the event of any emergency. President Kennedy also put into 'play' a very powerful ticking time bomb, so to speak, right in the vaults of the Federal Reserve Banking system.

(You must remember here that the Federal Reserve Banking system is a PRIVATE bank, and is not owned by the United States, its government or its citizens. My story isn't about the Federal Reserve but it is well worth your time to read the book about the Federal Reserve System I've listed in the last chapter.)

This time bomb is called debt. And the debt we owe as a nation is not owed by us but by the private and mostly foreign owned Federal Reserve Banking System. So, in order for any United States administration to become instantly debt free they only have to evoke the measures outlined in President Kennedy's Executive Order 11110.

Now if an administration did come to power that wanted to do this they would then also begin a process of massive spending, on everything they could think of (and wars are perfect for this) so that when the debt/time/bomb exploded there could be no recovery at all for the Federal Reserve Banking System.

Of course it goes without saying that the effects of this happening would have worldwide financial implications including the destruction of the dollar. But what if the United States knew that the world economy was about to be destroyed anyway? What if the United States not only knew that the world economy would collapse, but knew when would it happen? What would, could, the United States as a country do to protect itself?

On June 30, 1963 President Kennedy met with Pope Paul VI, who had just been installed on the throne of St. Peter the prior day. Though we don't know what they talked about we can assume a conversation took place with the President telling the Pope that both he and the United States had begun the process of ensuring our survival against the disasters soon to overtake the world. Five months later President Kennedy lay dead in Dallas.

Bushes Grow In the Strangest Places

"To open yourself up to Knowledge, is to open yourself up to Pain."

There is no way we can understand these times and what's facing us without also knowing who the President of United States is. This includes his family. Is he man thrust into the limelight of history? Or is he pre-positioned leader who is part of a master plan? Let's look at some history!

On October 20, 1942, the US Alien Property Custodian, under the "Trading With the Enemy Act," seized the shares of the Union Banking Corporation (UBC), of which Prescott Bush was a director and shareholder. The largest shareholder was E. Roland Harriman. (Bush was also the managing partner of Brown Brothers Harriman, a leading Wall Street investment firm.)

The UBC was established to send American capital to Germany to finance the reorganization of its industry under the Nazis. Their leading German partner was the notorious Nazi industrialist Fritz Thyssen, who wrote a book admitting much of this called "I Paid Hitler."

Among the companies financed was the Silesian-American Corporation, which was also managed by Prescott Bush, and by his father-in-law George Herbert Walker, who supplied our current President with his name. The company was vital in supplying coal to the Nazi war industry. It too was seized as a Nazi-front on November 17, 1942. The largest company Bush's UBC helped finance was the German Steel Trust, responsible for between one-third and one-half of Nazi iron and explosives.

Prescott Bush was also a director of the Harriman Fifteen Corporation, (this one owned largely by Roland's brother, Averell Harriman), which owned about a third of the Consolidated Silesian Steel Corporation, the rest owned by Friedrich Flick, (a member of Himmler's "Circle of Friends" who donated to the S.S.).

President Bush's great-grandfather, Bert Walker, helped organize the Harriman investment in the Hamburg-America Line of ships, of which grandfather Prescott became a director. It was seized on August 28, 1942 because it was used to give free passage to Nazi propaganda and propagandists, and had earlier shipped guns to the Nazi's private armies to assist their takeover of Germany.

Further examples would be more tedious than shocking. But, given these financial dealings, how did Prescott later become a Republican Senator, and George H.W. become President? Well, the two leading attorneys for these Bush-Han-iman-Nazi deals were John Foster Dulles, later Secretary of State under Eisenhower, and Alien Dulles, future head of the CIA.

Prescott's father, Samuel P. Bush, owned Buckeye Steel Castings Co., which made parts for the Harriman brothers' father's (E.H. Harriman) railroads. Harriman's financing for the railroads came largely from William Rockefeller. These shipped the oil of his brother John D. Rockefeller, the founder of Standard Oil. (This was the origin of the two Georges' involvement in the oil business.)

Samuel Bush became a leader in President Woodrow Wilson's "War Socialism" as director of small armaments and ammunition on the War Industries Board (which set up coercive price-fixing cartels over American industry during World War I). There, Bush assisted Percy Rockefeller (son of William) in his takeover of small arms manufacturers.

Our first President Bush, the 41st President, made his contribution both in time of war and in peace. Born in Milton Massachusetts, on June 12, 1924, he became a student leader at Phillips Academy in Andover. On his 18th birthday he enlisted in the armed forces. The youngest pilot in the Navy when he received his wings, he flew 58 combat missions during World War II. On one mission over the Pacific as a torpedo bomb pilot he was shot down by Japanese anti-aircraft fire and was rescued from the water by a U. S. submarine. He was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for bravery in action.

In January 1945 he married Barbara Pierce. They had six children- George, Robin (who died as a child), John (known as Jeb), Neil, Marvin, and Dorothy.

At Yale University he excelled both in sports and in his studies he was captain of the baseball team and a member of Phi Beta Kappa. After graduation Bush embarked on a career in the oil industry of West Texas.

Like his father, Prescott Bush, who was elected a Senator from Connecticut in 1952, he became interested in public service and politics. He served two terms as a Representative to Congress from Texas. Twice he ran unsuccessfully for the Senate. There he was appointed to a series of high-level positions Ambassador to the United Nations, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, Chief of the U. S. Liaison Office in the People's Republic of China, and Director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

In 1980 Bush campaigned for the Republican nomination for President. He lost, but was chosen as a running mate by Ronald Reagan. As Vice President, Bush had responsibility in several domestic areas, including Federal deregulation and anti-drug programs, and visited scores of foreign countries. In 1988 Bush won the Republican nomination for President and, with Senator Dan Quayle of Indiana as his running mate, he defeated Massachusetts Governor Michael Dukakis in the general election.

Bush faced a dramatically changing world, as the Cold War ended after 40 bitter years, the Communist Empire broke up, and the Berlin Wall fell. The Soviet Union ceased to exist; and reformist President Mikhail Gorbachev, whom Bush had supported, resigned. While Bush hailed the march of democracy, he insisted on restraint in U. S. policy toward the group of new nations.

In other areas of foreign policy, President Bush sent American troops into Panama to overthrow the corrupt regime of General Manuel Noriega, who was threatening the security of the canal and the Americans living there. Noriega was brought to the United States for trial as a drug trafficker.

Bush's greatest test came when Iraqi President Saddam Hussein invaded Kuwait, then threatened to move into Saudi Arabia. Vowing to free Kuwait, Bush rallied the United Nations, the U.S. people, and Congress and sent 425,000 American troops. They were joined by 118,000 troops from allied nations. After weeks of air and missile bombardment, the 100-hour land battle dubbed Desert Storm routed Iraq's million-man army.

Despite unprecedented popularity from this military and diplomatic triumph, Bush was unable to withstand discontent at home from a faltering economy, rising violence in inner cities, and continued high deficit spending. In 1992 he lost his bid for reelection to Democrat William Clinton.

George W. Bush is the 43rd President of the United States. He was sworn into office January 20, 2001. President Bush served for six years as the 46th Governor of the State of Texas, where he earned a reputation as a compassionate conservative who shaped public policy based on the principles of limited government, personal responsibility, strong families, and local control.

President Bush was born on July 6, 1946, in New Haven, Connecticut, and he grew up in Midland and Houston, Texas. He received a bachelor's degree from Yale University in 1968, then served as an F-102 fighter pilot in the Texas Air National Guard. President Bush received a Master of Business Administration from Harvard Business School in 1975. After graduating, he moved back to Midland and began a career in the energy business. After working on his father's successful 1988 presidential campaign, he assembled the group of partners that purchased the Texas Rangers baseball franchise in 1989.

He served as managing general partner of the Texas Rangers until he was elected Governor on November 8, 1994, with 53.5 percent of the vote. He became the first Governor in Texas history to be elected to consecutive four-year terms when he was re-elected on November 3, 1998, with 68.6 percent of the vote.

President Bush is married to Laura Welch Bush, a former teacher and librarian, and they have twin daughters, Barbara and Jenna.

Before we can go any further with the Bush family we've now got to understand another family that isn't as familiar to you, and their name is Warburg.

This by far is at the same time one of the most incredible families in history in that two brothers, both Warburgs, were responsible, and at the same time, for the financing of both sides during World War II. That's right, you didn't read this wrong. Paul Warburg, head of the United States Federal Reserve, and an advisor to President Roosevelt, financed the United States and its allies. At the same time his brother, Max Warburg, financed Nazi Germany and its allies.

A quick examination of Paul Warburg's crucial role in establishing the Federal Reserve Bank shows also that he was intimately acquainted with European central banks, especially the Reichsbank.

Paul didn't claim to originate new banking principles so much as import European practices. As with Max, Paul's older brother in Hamburg, Paul meshed spectacularly with his historical moment. Once again, a Warburg succeeded because of his contradictory status. As a Jew in a gentile world, a German immigrant confronting a new country, Paul was able to spot flaws in American finance to which native bankers had been blinded by familiarity.

Along with many other bankers Paul Warburg was unhappy with the risk inherent in America's decentralized banking system. The central bank he envisioned for the United States I would insure against future "panics" and do away with much of the risk of banking. To this end, he played a key but secretive role in this project.

In November 1910, Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island, Paul Warburg, and four other experts sneaked off to discuss bank reform at a secret hideaway on Jekyll Island off the Georgia coast. With Democrats now in control of Congress and Progressives railing against Wall Street, the bankers had to travel incognito, lest they be accused of hatching a cabal.

As part of the elaborate charade, the conference participants pretended to be sportsmen, outfitting themselves as duck hunters.

But why was such secrecy necessary if a central bank was really such a great idea? We are told, in effect, that Warburg and others hatched a cabal to avoid being accused of hatching a cabal.

Because it was the product of a furtive conclave, and secrecy still surrounds many central bank decision-making activities, it is hardly surprising that there are so many dark suspicions and "banking conspiracy" theories involving the Federal Reserve Bank.

Paul Warburg was the only person in America who understood how a central bank works. In 1912 and 1913, he drew up the basic plan for the Federal Reserve banking system, and he drafted the Federal Reserve Act. In December 1913 President Wilson signed the Act establishing the new central bank. If anyone can be called the father of the Federal Reserve Bank, the New York Times has rightly noted, it is Paul Warburg.

The new central bank's board of governors — which for several years included Paul Warburg — became top-heavy with political appointees whose policy of loose credit set the stage for the Great Depression. America's economic collapse of the 1930s can be traced to the Federal Reserve's operation by incompetents and self-serving hacks, or by deliberate design.

While Paul Warburg was making America safer for financiers, his older brother, Max, was busy in Hamburg helping finance construction of Germany's new merchant fleet through the HAPAG Company. Because the Warburg family fortune was built on financing international trade, Max Warburg naturally sought to encourage the growth of such trade. For the same reasons, international bankers encouraged the removal of tariffs and other trade barriers.

The HAPAG Company, headed by another German Jew, Albert Ballin, played a major role in building Germany's mighty merchant and military fleets. Britain regarded the German challenge as a grave threat to its naval hegemony, and it was this rivalry that was a major contributing factor to the First World War.

Max Warburg and Albert Ballin foresaw the catastrophe of world war in Germany's naval expansion, just as Paul Warburg saw that his creation was pursuing an unsound monetary policy. In each case the Warburgs were central players in the coming disaster.

Max Warburg's meshing with his historical moment cost the Hamburg branch of the family dearly. The Allied blockade of Germany during the First World War severely hurt the Warburg family bank, M. M. Warburg and Co. This, along with the disastrous postwar inflation, nearly mined the firm, which was I saved only with a large loan from Max's American brothers.

Because Max Warburg was so familiar with international finance, the postwar "Weimar Republic" government asked him to represent the German Treasury as a delegate in the war reparations negotiations.

In spite of being Jews, the Warburg family did very well for itself in Germany until the mid-1930s. Indeed, Germany's Jews generally prospered until the collapse of the Weimar Republic and the National Socialists coming to power in 1933. During the interwar era, three-quarters of German Jewry were middle-class or richer. There were no legal barriers to Jewish advancement in any field, and Jews were rapidly assimilating through intermarriage. In the year just before Hitler came to power, more than half of Jews who married took non-Jewish spouses.

None of this means, of course, that there weren't barriers to social mobility for Jews. But similar restrictions affected many non-Jews as well. Class barriers were a major feature of pre-Hitler Germany.

What is remarkable though is not the degree of intolerance, but the extent to which Jews were tolerated and even encouraged in Germany. Jews were permitted to wield tremendous power and influence, even though so many of them, with the Warburgs at the forefront, were part of a mighty, supra-national Jewish network that was dedicated above all to its own particular interests.

Members of this international Jewish elite cemented its ties through marriage. For example, Felix Warburg married Frieda Schiff, daughter of probably the most powerful Jew in America, the German-born Jacob Schiff. Felix's brother Paul married Nina Loeb, daughter of another prominent Jewish banker, Solomon Loeb.

An international network of Jewish organizations and charities devoted to the well-being of Jewish communities around the world operated as a shadow government for this scattered, stateless population. As leading members of the "Jewish royalty," the Warburgs played an important role in resettling hundreds of thousands of Russian and eastern European Jews in the United States during the late 19th and early 20th centuries, underwriting the development of a Jewish cultural center in Palestine, and other projects.

They also played a major role in domestic and international politics. During the Russo-Japanese war (1904-1905), Felix Warburg's father-in-law, Jacob Schiff, a fierce enemy of Tsarist Russia, helped finance the Japanese war effort. Driven by intense hatred of Russia's conservative, anti-Jewish government, Schiff kept Russia from obtaining Wall Street financing prior to the overthrow of the Tsarist regime and American entry into World War I.

A little-known but very ambitious Warburg project between the wars was the "Agro-Joint." Established in 1924 and financed by Felix Warburg, Julius Rosenwald (of Sears, Roebuck), and John D. Rockefeller, Jr., the "American Jewish Joint Agricultural Corporation" funneled millions of dollars into Soviet Russia to transplant hundreds of thousands of Jews to 215 farming colonies on two and a half million acres. "Agro-Joint" money purchased land, livestock, agricultural machinery and more than a thousand tractors. Four hundred trade schools were established to train Jews in metal, woodworking, printing and other skills.

In 1927 Felix Warburg toured the Soviet republic, visiting 40 of the Jewish agricultural colonies in Ukraine and Crimea, including two named after him. At meetings in their community halls, an elated and inspired Warburg praised the colonists and their pioneering work. Back in United States, he responded to critics with a vigorous defense of the Communist regime. Felix Warburg was, "quick to note that the Soviet government was improving the economic lot of the Jews."

The Utopian scheme lasted until 1937 when the Soviets double-crossed the American capitalists and absorbed the Jewish colonies into local Soviet agencies. The last "Agro-Joint" assets were transferred to the Soviet government in 1940.

This channeling of money to Soviet Russia greatly upset Zionist leaders such as Stephen Wise and Chaim Weizmann, who grumbled that the millions should have been directed instead to building a Jewish presence in Palestine. Weizmann worked very hard to win Warburg family support for the establishment of a Jewish state there. The Warburgs were skeptical of Zionism, though, fearing that a Jewish state would supplant the traditional organizations, which they headed, as the nexus of Jewish political power. To reassure the reluctant Warburgs, Weizmann told them that the term "Jewish State" was only meant metaphorically.

Back in Hamburg, Max Warburg was even less impressed than his American relations with Weizmann's efforts. Regarding himself as a German patriot, he felt that Germany's Jews should stay put, even though World War I had crippled his business and the ascension of the National Socialist party was driving away many of his clients. As the secular head of German-Jewry, he once referred to himself as the "god" of the Jews; much of his social status would be lost if the Jews emigrated.

Even the Warburgs were not entirely immune from the infectious enthusiasm of Hitler's movement. In 1930 Siegmund Warburg told his cousin Karl that, the anti-Semitism aside, he saw some redeeming qualities in the National Socialist cause. "The Nazis are doubtless in part dreadfully primitive in human and political terms," he wrote in a letter. "On the other hand, one finds among a large part of them valuable, typically German strengths, which are indeed incredible in a political connection, but show strong feeling for social and national duties..."

When Hitler came to power in January 1933, Max Warburg was Germany's most prominent Jewish banker. He headed the most important private banking firm, and was a member of the "general council" of the nation's central bank. In March 1933 he approved Hitler's decision to name Dr. Hjalmar Schacht as president of the Reichsbank. The document naming Schacht to this post is signed by Chancellor Hitler and President von Hindenburg, as well as the eight members of the Reichsbank "general council," including the Jews Mendelssohn, Wassermann and Warburg.

Schacht's skill during the 1920s in curing runaway inflation and getting the German economy back on an even keel earned him world renown as a financial wizard. A conservative, old school banker, he never joined the National Socialist party. Tried by the Nuremberg Tribunal as a "major war criminal," he was acquitted.

At a meeting in July 1934, Hitler asked Schacht if he would also head up the German Economics Ministry. "Before I take office I should like to know how you wish me to deal with the Jewish question?" Schacht asked. "In economic matters, the Jews can carry on exactly as they have done up to now," replied Hitler.

In 1936, for example, three years after Hitler took power, the M. M. Warburg bank in Hamburg was still profitable. Among other lucrative connections, it was still disbursing interest payments to bondholders for the giant Friedrich Krupp company of Essen. As Siegmund Warburg wrote in July 1936: "M. M. W. and Co. are still remarkably untouched by the Nazi situation and the business is doing well." Even in 1938 the Warburg bank was turning a profit.

Max Warburg opposed the international Jewish boycott of German goods, particularly because his bank derived most of its income from international trade. And M.M. Warburg and Co. played an important role in facilitating the "Haavara" or "transfer" agreement.

Through this remarkable arrangement, concluded in 1933 between Hitler's government and the Zionist leadership, property of Jews immigrating to Palestine was used to purchase German-made goods, which were shipped to Palestine and sold there. Money from the sale of these goods went to the migrating Jews. About ten percent of German Jewry emigrated through the "Haavara" deal, which benefited Jewish emigrants, helped overcome the anti-German boycott, and immensely strengthened the Zionist community in Palestine. Moreover, it enriched Max Warburg's bank, which served as conduit for three-fourths of "Haavara" funds.

Until 1938, Max Warburg benefited from his cordial personal relationship with Dr. Schacht. But as Schacht's influence with Hitler waned, so did Warburg's position in German business. As German corporations were "Aryanized," Warburg was forced to substitute a trusted non-Jewish company employee for himself on the hundred or so corporate boards on which he held a seat.

When the Warburg bank itself was Aryanized in May 1938, an era that began in 1798 seemingly came to an end. The firm was turned over to a non-Jewish employee, Rudolf Brinckmann, and Max Warburg left his Hamburg office for the last time. A short while later he left Germany forever, dying in 1946 in the United States. The firm's traditional name lingered until 1941, when it was changed to Brinckmann, Wirtz and Co.

As I'm not writing a history book, but telling a story, I'm going to spare you page after page of mind numbing facts, people, places, and dates. There are many other books on the subject matter of banking, including the families behind the money.

What I am trying to show you are the connections that exist between our present President, our former President, and their connections going back to the early part of the 20th Century. And it is important to realize that when you look at the Bush family, including our President, you are seeing a dynasty that has not only foreseen these times we live in today, but are part of a network of people and organizations that have made our history.

Who's In Charge?

At this point in my story I'd like to talk about who is in charge, and not just of the United States, but in charge of everything. It's a tall order to be sure but made simple in that I can state to you now that the people we elect have no power at all, and they never have.

Without me having to go into page after page giving you an American and World history lesson suffice it say that this world of ours has been controlled by a relatively few individuals throughout its history. Whether they are called, Kings, Queens, Presidents, Dictators, or Potentates, the power of leadership over men has never strayed too far away from the 'gods' of our ancient past. Human beings after all were made as workers and slaves, we've never been looked upon as anything different.

Because we've also never been allowed to know who and what we really are, we remain today in about the same condition and circumstances that all of our ancestors found themselves, sheep being led to the slaughter. Even as I write these words millions of young men and women the world over are dying in wars being fought for reasons they couldn't even fathom, and like the millions before them throughout history, they remain the pawns of powers beyond their understanding.

So let's take some time here and look at some lies.

In a September 22nd, 2002 speech to visiting Christian Zionists, Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon asserted, "This land is ours... God gave us the title deeds..."

However, recent scholarly research, including discoveries by an archaeological team from the University of Tel Aviv, not only deconstruct the Biblical Old Testament and Torah stories upon which this claim rests, but grant previously unthinkable credence to an ancient historian's claim that the Israelites of Exodus were actually the Hyksos, and therefore of Asiatic origin. But to trace the foundations of this ongoing Biblical bonfire, we must go back to 1999.

All hell broke loose in Israel in November, 1999 when Prof. Ze'ev Herzog of Tel Aviv University announced: "the Israelites were never in Egypt, did not wander the desert, did not conquer the land, and did not pass it on to the twelve tribes". Moreover, the Jewish God YHWH had a female consort - the goddess Asherah!

His conclusion that the kingdom of David and Solomon was at best a small tribal monarchy, at worst total myth, has made enemies for him in the camps of traditional Jewish and Christian belief systems. He asserts that all evidence demonstrates that the Jews did not adopt monotheism until the 7th Century BCE - a heresy according to the Biblical tradition dating it to Moses at Mount Sinai.

Tel Aviv University's archaeological investigation at Megiddo and examination of the six-sided gate there dates it to the 9th Century BCE, not the 10th Century BCE claimed by the 1960's investigator Yigael Yadin who attributed it to Solomon. Herzog, moreover, states that Solomon and David are "entirely absent in the archaeological record".

In addition, Herzog's colleague, Israel Finkelstein, claims the Jews were nothing more than nomadic Canaanites who bartered with the city dwellers. The team's studies concluded that Jerusalem did not have any central status until 722 BCE with the destruction of its northern rival Samaria.

However, the real bombshell is Herzog's discovery of numerous references to Yahweh having a consort in the form of Asherah. Inscriptions, written in Hebrew by official Jewish scribes in the 8th century BCE, were found in numerous sites all over the land. For Yahweh, supposedly the "One God", to have had a female consort and, of all people, the goddess Asherah, is dynamite of wide ranging significance.

The use of Yahweh as the name of God has always fuelled speculation and philosophical argument. YHWH, sometimes pronounced Jehovah, is taken to mean "I AM" or "I AM WHO I AM". There is also the puzzle of the rule that his mysterious real name is not to be spoken.

The identification of the goddess Asherah (Asherat) as His consort somewhere within the original Jewish faith leads to some explosive conclusions about the identity of the Jewish/Christian God of the Cosmos, the one Monotheistic God with whom we are so familiar from western religion.

But before looking at Asherah, and what she means to the identity of Yahweh, it is worth taking a look at another goddess, Ashteroth. Her significance will become evident a little later. Referred to as an "abomination" in 2 Kings, Ashteroth was an important deity in the Near East pantheons.

To the Sumerians she was IN.ANNA (Anu's beloved) and is an important character in the Sumerian Epics. To the Assyrians and Babylonians she was Ishtar; Ashstoreth was her name for the Canaanites; to the Greeks - Aphrodite; the Romans - Venus.

The most important equivalent however is the Egyptian goddess Hathor, whom the Greeks identified with Aphrodite. Hathor was the wife of Horus, the God of War. Hathor is identified with the symbol of the cow, and statues of her in the 26th Dynasty (572 - 525 BC) in Egypt actually depict her as a cow.

Asherah, (whose name means "she who walks in the sea") supposedly consort of the supreme god El, was also referred to as Elath (the goddess). According to the Ugarit tradition, whose clay tablets contain the earliest known alphabet, she was consort of El, and mother of seventy gods.

She is also associated with Baal and is supposed to have interceded to her husband, the supreme god, on Baal's behalf, for the building of a palace - in order to grant him equal status with other gods.

In the cuneiform tablets of Ras Shamrah (Circa 1400 BCE) the head of the Pantheon was El; his wife was Asherat-of-the-sea (Asherah). After El, the greatest god was Baal, son of El and Asherah. Curiously, Baal's consort is his mother, Asherah. In the Lebanon traditions Baal is equated with Jupiter.

Carvings of Asherah in Syria show her wearing an Egyptian headdress. She was also referred to later as "the cow", a reference to her great age.

Significantly, Baalat (an important Goddess at Byblos) is depicted in carvings as having cow's horns, between which is a halo. Baalat is in fact the form of Asherah when she appears alongside Baal.

But what does this say about the identity of Yahweh? The Bible has always presented a confusing picture of Yahweh. In the light of Herzog's discoveries and conclusions that Yahweh's consort was Asherah, it deserves a closer examination.

Exodus 6:3 states "And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by [the name of] God Almighty (El Shaddai), but by my name "I AM" was I not known to them." In the King James Version, "I AM" is translated as Jehovah (Yahweh) but means the same: "I AM". The use of "God Almighty" is a traditional translation of Shaddai, thought to have meant "Omnipotent", but arguably it could be linked to the Akkadian root word Shadu, meaning literally "mountains".

And El Shaddai is only one of the versions of God described in Genesis. El Shaddai literally translated means, "God the one of the mountains", but there was also El Olam (God the everlasting one). El Elyon (God most high), and El Ro'i (God of vision).

The obvious question is why did YHWH reveal himself to the patriarchs as El Shaddai? The answer lies in the religious traditions of Canaan, where Abraham is said to have lived for a time, and which were brought to Canaan by the Phoenicians. (In turn, the root of Phoenician religious tradition is Sumer.)

God-the-one-of-the-mountains has a Sumerian equivalent. ISH.KUR, the youngest son of Enlil, means God the one of the far mountains. Ishkur was also known as Adad or Hadad in Hebrew, brother of Nannar/Sin, and was the pre-eminent God of Canaan - El-Shaddai.

According to biblical scholars who focus on the "P Source" for the Old Testament, Yahweh as a name is first used with Moses in Exodus, and is indicative of monolatry (exclusive worship of one of many Gods) rather than monotheism. The name Yahweh can also be translated as "I am who I am", literally a way of saying "mind your own business", a way of disguising his true identity. Yahweh does not appear until Exodus and, strangely, the god Baal is entirely absent in Genesis.

El Shaddai is still venerated in the Jewish faith in the form of the Tefillin, one of two small leather cube-shaped cases containing Torah Texts, traditionally to be worn by males from the age of 13. The Tefillin are worn in a manner to represent the letters shin, dalet, and yod, which together form the name lhaddai.)

In Exodus 33:2 it states "And I will send an angel before thee; and I will drive out the Canaanite, the Amorite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite: 33:3 Into a land flowing with milk and honey: for I will not go up in the midst of thee; for thou [art] a stiff-necked people: lest I consume thee on the way."

This Yahweh is prone to violence and seems to despise his chosen people. He is a perfect match for ISH.KUR (Hadad), whose land is occupied by the Amorites and Hittites, and is a known demonstrator of violence and contempt for his worshipers.

ISH.KUR's image, traits, and symbols match those of Baal. He's also anti-Babylon and anti-Egypt, as is Yahweh. And like Yahweh's, the real name of the Canaanite Baal (Hadad) must not be spoken.

On the basis of Herzog's discovery, the evidence within the bible itself, the Sumerian, Phoenician and Canaanite traditions, the following is a logical conclusion and solution to the identity of the Jewish God of the Old Testament: ISH.KUR = Hadad = El Shaddai = Baal = Yahweh.

This indicates, as does Herzog's work, that the Jewish people evolved from polytheism to monotheism with the promotion of a god who had been known by a variety of names, into one supreme God, Yahweh (whose real name must not be spoken), and that they adopted for this purpose, not the supreme God of the Pantheons, El, but his son - ISH.KUR, Baal, Hadad, El-Shaddai, an entity who was in open revolt against his father El, and ultimately aided in this revolt by his mother and consort, Asherah, (also known as Baalat, Ashteroth, Elat).

This female entity was later merged by Greek and Roman traditions into Aphrodite and Venus, and known earlier to the Egyptians as Isis.

Once we understand this, the etymology of the name Israel - Is (either Isis or tomb) Ra (Head of the Egyptian Pantheon) El (Lord - Baal) - makes far more obvious sense than the convoluted "Yisrael" yarn from the Hebrew faith.

But what does all this do to the validity of the "Title Deeds" from God that Ariel Sharon refers to? Quite apart from the obvious conclusion that the god assumed to have given the "promised land" to his chosen people was just one god from a pantheon and not the alleged monotheistic only God of the cosmos, Herzog's findings corroborate theories that have been "out there" for some time.

Like Herzog, the historian Josephus (c. 37CE - c. 100CE) denied the account of the Hebrews being held in captivity in Egypt, but he went a drastic step further about the racial origins of the Jews, whom he identified with the Hyksos. He further claimed they did not flee from Egypt but were evicted due to them being leprous.

It must be said that Josephus has been vilified over the ages as a Roman collaborator by both Jewish and Christian scholars who have argued that the dating of the exodus of the "Hebrews" from Egypt in the Bible positively rules out their identification as Hyksos.

However, Jan Assmann, a prominent Egyptologist at Heidelberg University, is quite positive in his writings that the Exodus story is an inversion of the Hyksos expulsion and furthermore that Moses was an Egyptian.

Likewise, Donald P. Redford, of Toronto University, presents striking evidence that the expulsion of the Hyksos from Egypt was inverted to construct the exodus of the Hebrew slaves story in the Torah and Old Testament. His book, which argued this theory, "Egypt, Canaan, and Israel in Ancient Times" was Winner of the 1993 Best Scholarly Book in Archaeology Award of the Biblical Archaeological Society.

There is irrefutable evidence that the Hyksos, a mixed Semitic-Asiatic group who infiltrated the Nile valley, seized power in Lower Egypt in the 17th Century BCE. They ruled there from c. 1674 BCE until expelled when their capital, Avaris, fell to Ahmose around 1567 BCE.

The Hyksos in Egypt worshipped Set who, like ISH.KUR, they identified as a storm deity.

Under the "inversion theory", Jewish scholars in the 7th Century BCE changed the story from "expelled" to "escaped" and as a further insult to their enemy, Ahmose, changed and miss-spelt his name to Moses, presenting him as leader of a Hebrew revolt. But there is also a strong possibility of two separate origins to the "Moses" character being merged into one, which I will come to later.

Ahmose's success in 1567 BCE led to the establishment of the 18th Dynasty in Egypt. Thutmose III overthrew the transvestite Pharaoh Aakheperre Intef, and under Thutmose IV Egyptian conquests extended beyond the Sinai into Palestine, Syria, reaching Babylonia and included Canaan.

By the end of this expansion, Amenophis III (1380BCE) ruled an Egyptian empire whose provinces and colonies bordered what is now known as Turkey. This empire would have included the regions in which most of the expelled Hyksos now lived.

Amenophis IV succeeded the throne in 1353BCE. He established a new monotheism cult establishing "Aten" as the one supreme god and he changed his name to Akhenaton. Married to the mysterious Nefertiti, Akhenaton declared himself a god on earth, intermediary between the one-god Aten (Ra) and humanity, with his spouse as partner, effectively displacing Isis and Osiris in the Egyptian Enead.

Declaring all men to be the children of Aten, historians suspect Akhenaton planned an empire-wide religion. He banned all idolatry, the use of images to represent god, and banned the idea that there was more than one supreme god.

It is alongside Akhenaten and his father Amenophis III that we find the second Moses.

An important figure during this period was confusingly called Amenophis son of Hapu. He was First Minister (Vizier) to both kings. He is generally depicted as a scribe, crouching and holding on his knees a roll of papyrus. He more than anyone was responsible for authoring the religion in which the old gods were merged into one living god, Aten, who had been responsible for the creation of the Earth and of humanity.

The symbol of this god, the sun disk, represented Ra, Horns and the other gods in one. The sun disk, in symbolism, was supported between the horns of a bull. The Son of Hapu says this about creation: "I have come to you who reigns over the gods oh Amon, Lord of the Two Lands, for you are Ra who appears in the sky, who illuminates the earth with a brilliantly shining eye, who came out of the Nun, who appeared above the primitive water, who created everything, who generated the great Enneade of the gods, who created his own flesh and gave birth to his own form."

The king's overseer of the land of Nubia was a certain Mermose (spelled both Mermose and Merymose on his sarcophagus in the British Museum). According to modern historians, in Amenhotep's third year as king, Mermose took his army far up the Nile, supposedly to quell a minor rebellion, but actually to secure gold mining territories which would supply his king with the greatest wealth of any ruler of Egypt.

Recent scholarship has indicated Mermose took his army to the neighborhood of the confluence of the Nile and Atbara Rivers and beyond.

But who was this Mermose? According to historian Dawn Breasted, the Greek translation of this name was Moses. Does Jewish tradition support this identification?

According to Jewish history not included in the Bible, Moses led the army of Pharaoh to the South, into the land of Kush, and reached the vicinity of the Atbara River. There he attracted the love of the princess of the Fortress City of Saba, later Meroe.

She gave up the city in exchange for marriage. Biblical confirmation of such a marriage is to be found in Numbers 12:1. "And Miriam and Aaron spoke against Moses because of the Ethiopian woman whom he had married: for he had married an Ethiopian woman."

The end of Akhenaten's reign is shrouded in mystery, scholarship about which is beyond the scope of my story. In summary, however, theories span from the death of Nefertiti from plague - Akhenaten's own death from plague or murder -to exile.

On clear record, in contrast, is the return of Egypt to the Enead of the gods and a systematic attempt to erase all vestiges of Akhenaton and his cult in Egypt.

Meanwhile, the expelled Hyksos, according to various historians, have been living in Canaan.

It is here that a solution to the Biblical dating problem of linking the Israelites to the Hyksos appears.

Using the dating of the Biblical Exodus and comparing it to the Egyptian dating of the Hyksos expulsion throws up a gap of about 400 years. Using the dating systems of the books of Judges and Samuel, this gap can extend to between 554 and 612 years.

However, there is clear historical record of post Hyksos Egypt extending its empire into Canaan, the land into which the Hebrews entered and lived, according to Biblical sources, for 400 years before establishing the kingdom of Solomon.

The Hebrews living in Canaan were therefore under Egyptian rule. It is also here in Canaan that we can make a comparison between Yahweh and the Canaanite Moloch (Baal) and extrapolate a polemic inversion of the story of Pharaoh ordering the death of all the "first born" in Exodus.

The worshippers of Moloch sacrificed their first born children to their deity through immolation. Worshippers of Yahweh in Canaan were also known to carry out child sacrifice on occasion, especially in times of hardship, although immolation (holocaust) was supposedly frowned upon. Slitting the child's throat, however, was acceptable.

The sacrifices were carried out and the remains interred at sacred sites known as Topheth. Sometimes - although rarely, judging by the vast predominance of infant human bones found at Topheth sites by archaeologists - animals were sacrificed as substitutes.

Modern historical disciplines studying the biblical era uniformly conclude that Exodus could not have been written earlier than the 7th century BCE, and certainly not by the Biblical Moses who at best is a fictional combination of Egyptian personalities.

In Israel itself, 7th Century BCE is the period in which the archaeological evidence presented by Herzog suggests the emergence of Jerusalem as a cultural center occurs.

By all accounts, it is a cultural center struggling to find an identity and nationality for itself and, given the discovery of the Jewish texts displaying Yahweh having a consort in the form of Asherah, it is not difficult to piece this jigsaw together.

In 639BCE, Josiah, king of Judah, is known to have introduced wide-ranging religious reforms and brought additional areas of "Israel" under his control.

It is during this period that "polemics" against and "inversion" of a wide variety of religious and cultural sources are brought together to form a religious and political unity. For Josiah's "inquisitors", where history is unheroic, such as the expulsion from Egypt in the form of the Hyksos, history is inverted. Where religion is bereft of moral unity, the cult of Aten is interweaved, satisfying existing belief systems within the region and bestowing upon the king, Josiah, the position of divine right through a lineage to Solomon and David - both replacements for Aten's ancestors and his temple-building reputation. Josiah also destroys the Topheth Temple said to have been built by Solomon in the Hinnon valley just outside Jerusalem, to the south.

Within this unifying mechanism, there are obfuscations to mitigate existing belief systems, which require the true name of God to be kept secret, and for which there is precedence in the cults of Baal and ISH-KUR, all part of the mish-mash of the region, and all designed to plaster over the holes in the new Yahweh-based system. An important separation of the identities of Baal-Moloch-Yahweh is implemented, although the evolution of ISH-KUR to Hadad to Baal to Yahweh does not remain disguised owing to the later polemic against Babylon written up as Genesis, which as we've discussed previously is the Readers Digest condensed version of the much larger Sumerian creation epic.

Well known in Egypt, including at the time of the Aten cult, was the following passage from the Book of the Dead:

I have not robbed.

I have not coveted.

I have not killed people.

I have not told lies.

I have not trespassed.

I have not committed adultery.

I have not cursed a god.

Josiah's unification process takes Moses, an Ideogram combining the Ahmose who expelled the Hyksos, and the Mermose who led the Egyptian army to great victories, and credits him with receiving the Ten Commandments in tablets of stone. In reality these laws are an elaboration of the above declaration.

Add to this the fact that the obscure Egyptian king's "Hymn to Aten" is almost "word for word" Psalm 104 in the Bible and we have another compelling "coincidence".

Josiah's unification should of course be applauded. It outlawed the Moloch cult and emphasized the spiritual morality of the Ten Commandments. The polemics and inversions adding a heroic slant to the history of his people are understandable and politically astute.

But beginning c. 200CE, somewhere along the line, and unlike the Aten cult, supremacy of race is added to the Jewish faith.

In summary, however, it is Herzog's discovery of Yahweh's consort Asherah in Jewish texts and his declaration of an archaeological absence of Solomon or David, that is the scalpel with which to slice through all the fictions of the biblical Exodus and its suggestion of divine right and supremacy. For that reason, Herzog must not be forgotten.

Even though his scholarship is ignored by the politics of modern day Israel, it contains a lesson for the rest of the world, and in particular for those nations who support Israel's supremacist doctrines.

Israel, modern, has no "divine right" to the land it occupies.

Given the religious and cultural battleground upon which Israel is placed, its absence of recognition of modern reality, and in a world armed with nuclear weapons, until Israel - armed with those weapons - separates itself from doctrines of "divine right" and "racial supremacy", it will continue to be the breeding ground for a fight against racial and political injustice - at the center of the modern-day world's geo-political processes -which is leading our entire species to destruction.

There's a funny thing about the truth, it doesn't care about anything; it is what it is. We as human beings, though, have been so manipulated, and for so long that we very rarely recognize the truth even when we're looking right at!

So who's in charge? The same demonic gods from our past that began this war the minute they created us, that's who!

Pick Your Side, The Fun's About To Begin!
Pick Me! Me!

Have you ever heard the story that we human beings only use 10 % of our brains? But do you know that our brain uses 30 of its capabilities for vision alone? So how could we be using only 10? The answer is meme.

What is a meme? It is a contagious information pattern that replicates by parasitically infecting human minds and altering their behavior, causing them to propagate the pattern. Individual slogans, catch phrases, melodies, icons, inventions, and fashions are typical memes. An idea or information pattern is not a meme until it causes someone to replicate it, to repeat it to someone else. All transmitted knowledge is memetic. And because we human beings are all parts of one living entity this is how our 'god' masters have effectively controlled us.

It is important to note here that, in contrast to genes, memes are not encoded in any universal code within our brains or in human culture. The meme for vanishing point perspective in two-dimensional art, for example, which first appeared in the sixteenth century, can be encoded and transmitted in German, English or Chinese; it can be described in words, or in algebraic equations, or in line drawings. Nonetheless, in any of these forms, the meme can be transmitted, resulting in a certain recognizable element of realism which appears only in art works executed by artists infected with this meme.

And memes survive in the world because people pass them on to other people, either vertically to the next generation, or horizontally to our fellow humans. This process is analogous to the way willow genes cause willow trees to spread them, or perhaps closer to the way cold viruses make us sneeze and spread them.

My favorite example of a crucial meme would be "fire" or more importantly, "how to make a fire." This is a behavioral meme, mind you, one which didn't necessarily need a word attached to it to spring up and spread, merely a demonstration for another to follow. Once the meme was out there, it would have spread like wildfire, for obvious reasons... But when you start to think of memes like that — behavioral memes — then you can begin to see how language itself, the idea of language, was a meme. Writing was a meme. And within those areas, more specific memes emerged.

Memes, like genes, vary in their fitness to survive in the environment of human intellect. Some reproduce like bunnies, but are very short-lived (fashions), while others are slow to reproduce, but hang around for eons (religions). Note that the fitness of the meme is not necessarily related to the fitness that it confers upon the human being that holds it. The most obvious example of this is the "Smoking is Cool" meme, which does very well for itself while killing off its hosts at a great rate.

And most terrifying to our master 'gods' is that time and space do not restrict memes. An 'idea' arising in North America will soon rise in Africa, and can do so in the same instant.

The only effective means of controlling us pesky earth humans is to keep us continually fighting against each other, dividing ourselves into groups, tribes, societies, countries, religions, whatever works. The failure to do this however would be catastrophic to the 'gods'. The curtain would part, the Master Wizard of Oz would be revealed.

And now, right now, in this early part of the 21st Century there exist but two remaining factions, 'gods' and 'men', and we're getting ready to duke it out!

The Best Laid Plans

"...And there was WAR IN HEAVEN: Michael fought against THE DRAGON; and THE DRAGON fought and his angels... and the GREAT DRAGON was cast out, that OLD SERPENT, called the Devil, and Satan, which DECIEVETH the whole world..."

As they have done so often in our past, the 'gods', in knowing the coming global destruction soon to destroy the greater part of human life on earth, had been content to just let us go on our merry way towards oblivion. Their knowledge was that when all was said and done they'd rebuild us after the destruction and life would go on. But some very smart humans aided by some good 'gods' had a plan of their own. The survival of humans, the overthrowing of the 'gods', and an awakening of humanity as to who we really are, and then the taking of our rightful place in the Universe.

For those of us living now our part began, but more rightly was continued, in the 1960's when President Kennedy knowing of the approach of Planet X and the devastation it would cause, particularly to the North American continent, began the preparation to ensure the survival of not only the United States but all humanity.

The plan was to vastly increase our military, economic, and industrial might to the point where no other nation on earth could oppose us... while at the same time transporting that same power to every corner of the earth. Along with weapons of war for fighting on earth we have also in the past 40 years spent countless billions on space based weapons, and in fact have been using them.

Far from living in denial about the existence of UFO's and aliens the United States has been in a state of war with them, and it continues to this very minute.

Here is just one recent report from me front lines: ...

The object entered South African air space at 13.52 GMT. Radio contact was attempted with object, but all communications proved futile. As a result two armed Mirage fighters were scrambled. A short time later the object suddenly changed course at great speed that would have been impossible for conventional aircraft to duplicate.

At 13.59 GMT, Squadron Leader — the pilot of the fighter reported that they had radar and visual confirmation of the object. The order was given to arm and fire the experimental aircraft-mounted Thor 2 laser cannon. This was done.

"Squadron leader — reported that several blinding flashes emitted from the object which had started wavering whilst heading in a northerly direction. At 14.02 it was reported that the object was decreasing altitude at a rate of 3000 feet per minute. Then at speed it dived at an angle of 25 degrees and impacted in desert terrain 80 miles north of the South African border within Botswana, identified as the central Kalahari Desert.

Squadron leader — was instructed to circle the area until a retrieval team arrived. Teams of Air Force Intelligence Officers, together with medical and technical staff were promptly taken to the area of impact for Investigation and retrieval.

The findings were as follows:

- 1) a crater 150 meters in diameter and 12 meters in depth.
- 2) A silver colored disk shaped object 45 degrees embedded inside of crater.
- 3) Around the object sand and rocks were fused together by the intense heat.
- 4) An intense magnetic and radioactive environment around the object resulted in electronic failure of air force equipment (causing the crash of one Air Force helicopter).
- 5) The object was eventually moved to an Air Force Base for further investigation.
- 6) The terrain of impact was filled with sand and rubble to disguise all evidence of the event having taken place..."

The report indicated that a hydraulic type landing gear was fully deployed, suggesting that electronic malfunction had caused the object to crash, probably due to the Thor 2 laser cannon having been fired at the craft. While the team observed the object at the Air Force Base a loud sound was heard. It was then noted that a hatch on the lower side of the craft had opened slightly and appeared to be stuck. This opening was later forced with the use of hydraulic pressure equipment, at which point two humanoid entities in tight fitting gray suits emerged and were promptly apprehended. The report stated that the entities were of the following description:

"HEIGHT: 4-5.5 ft.;

COMPLEXION: Grayish blue - skin texture smooth, extremely resilient;

HAIR: Totally devoid of any bodily hair;

HEAD: Oversize in relation to human proportions. Raised cranium with dark blue markings around head;

FACE: Prominent cheek bones;

EYES: Large and slanted upwards towards side of face. No pupils seen;

NOSE: Small consisting of two nostrils;

MOUTH: Small slit devoid of lips;

JAW: Small in relation to human proportions;

BODY/ARMS: Long and thin reaching just above knees;

HANDS: CONSISTING OF 3 DIGITS, WEBBED, CLAW-LIKE NAILS; TORSO: CHEST AND ABDOMEN COVERED WITH SCALY RIBBED SKIN;

HIPS: Small narrow;

LEGS: Short and thin;

GENITALS: NO EXTERIOR sexual organs;

FEET: CONSISTING OF THREE TOES, NO NAILS AND WEBBED.

NOTES: Due to AGGRESSIVE NATURE of humanoids, no samples of blood or tissue could be taken (One humanoid ATTACKED DOCTOR causing DEEP SCRATCHES ON FACE AND CHEST). When offered various food, refused to eat... One way passage has been requested for hot humanoids to Wright Patterson Air Force Base USA for more advanced investigation and research..."

The fall of the Soviet Union opened up many of their previous Top Secret Files and here are a few of their reports.

1947. Antiaircraft guns of Transcaucasian Military District fired on a flying cigar-shaped object, which came from the side of the Turkish border. The objects flying altitude was below 4,000 meters, and the guns were capable of reaching target at the altitudes up to 12,000 meters, but that time the fire made no harm to the "cigar". Then the cigar increased its speed and flew away over the mountains.

This incident could cause much trouble, because earlier the border guards and military ships monitoring service missed, this target. Then the military was unable to trace this flying object over the country's territory. The Border District command ignored and ordered the monitors not to disclose the information that the object reached a speed up to 200 kilometers per hour.

Similar case took place in 1984 in Turkestan Military District Near the city of Astrakhan air-defense system marked the ball-shaped object flying at the altitude of 2000 meters along the Caspian seashore in the direction of the state border. The object did not respond to the inquiry made by the military on the radio. Two fighter-planes took off, but they were unable to bring the object down.

After being under fire, the object descended down to 100 meters, and at this low altitude the planes were unable to continue firing. Despite being fired at, the object was having a regular speed. The ball passed over several military units, which allowed to make its photo. Near the city of Krasnoyarsk the military tried to bring the object down with the helicopter. However, it quickly increased its altitude so that the helicopter could not reach it. After firing all its supply of shells, the helicopter landed, and the ball abruptly flew in the direction of the sea and disappeared from the radar screens.

In the same area the similar scenario case happened later. The object having the shape of cylinder demonstrated its invulnerability.

Such a demonstration could be the purpose of its flight, because this UFO was having a speed of 100 kilometers per hour.

In 1985, near the town of Krasnovodsk the radar station under the command of Captain Valuev registered the disc-shaped object in size of 1,000 meters! The object was immovable, and some time later a small disc in size of 5 meters flew out of it and then landed on Krasnovodskaya spit. Patrol boats rushed to that area, but when they reached the distance of 100 meters from the object, it took off and flew one kilometer away. This happened five times. Then the object flew up at a huge speed, reached the bigger disc, which finally flew away spaceward.

In the late 1960's the Soviets created a research institute to investigate "flying object" reports in the USSR. Among the laboratory's tasks was researching anti-gravitation, but the research results were made secret. Its testing area was near the town of Kapustin Yar on purpose. In the end of June of 1971 the military could see over this area a black cigar-shaped flying object floating under the clouds at the altitude of 800 meters. The object was 25 meters long and had about 3 meter, in diameter. It had neither stabilizers nor wings nor engine, and was moving at the speed of 150 kilometers per hour, producing no noise.

In 1978, the Soviet Ministry of Defense accepted Network MC program. Special military unit in the town of Mytishi was in charge of collecting data, and newly established "space troops" were designated to fight possible threat from space.

In the beginning of August 1987, five soldiers of Leningrad Military District went to the North of Karelia region on a special mission. They were required to guard the object of unknown origin. It was found on the territory of another military unit near the town of Vyborg. The item was 14 meters long, 4 meters wide, 2.5 meters high. The object had neither doors nor hatches, and all attempts to open its hull were unsuccessful. The military tried to break off some object parts, but were only able to take some rods from its stern. In the end of September the object disappeared from the hangar without leaving a trace.

(And again folks, though UFO's are certainly a part of my story they are not the main part. UFOs exist, millions of people over thousands of years haven't been and are not now lying. If you believe otherwise you're reading the wrong book for sure. For everyone else, in the last chapter I've listed some great books on this subject for you to read if you choose to.)

But even as this war has been raging we as a nation have been preparing.

As I had outlined earlier President Kennedy got the ball rolling with his massive reorganization of the government. Congress played its part by passing year after year massive spending increases for the military and intelligence communities. President Kennedy also began a program of mass misinformation with NASA and the moon project.

The President believed that there was no way to inform the American public about what was going to happen in the future and still have a viable society to work with so he lied, and every President since then has lied to us too.

The reason is simple. In the 1950's during the Eisenhower administration the Rand Corporation, a large think tank, under a contract from the Central Intelligence Agency reported that in the event that the American public knew about a cataclysmic event about to befall them there would be mass panic and suicide with homicide rates approaching 20 of the population.

They further reported that in order to build and equip enough underground structures that could protect the entire population of the United States would cost on average 25 of our gross domestic product. The utilization of this large amount of the country's GDP would then raise the cost of living to unsupportable levels for over 90 of the population.

The report continues in stating that the competition for raw materials between the government and the private sectors would virtually destroy the housing market and industrial expansion. On and on the report went to conclude the obvious, if the United States were to survive a cataclysmic event it would have to do so in secret.

So under President Kennedy's direction the government began a long-term project to ensure our country's survival, even if our country ceased to exist.

But no sooner than this process began, its leader, our President was killed. The 'gods' weren't going to take our preparations lying down! But neither were we going to allow them to have the final say.

Under the new governmental structure that President Kennedy was able to start before he died, there was fortunately enough of the process started to ensure that neither President Johnson, nor Congress, could stop it. The massive funding required for both the Vietnam war (defense and intelligence) and NASA funding ensured our protection. Billions of 'secret' funding, of course, being added to each appropriation bill but funneled instead to Home Land Defense.

In order to ensure an uninterrupted supply of resources we also knew that we would have to keep control of the power structure of the government, the Presidency specifically. So in 1968 it was decided that Robert Kennedy, the late President's brother, would be the perfect choice to continue the plans his brother had started. But it was not to be.

In June, 1968, and riding a rising wave of popular support, Robert Kennedy was killed thus insuring a victory for Richard Nixon.

The faction that Nixon represented began during the Eisenhower administration with the appeasement of the 'gods' and an exchange of alien technology for their right to use human beings as experimental guinea pigs.

Nixon after taking office began the process of shutting off all funding for Home Land Defense by bringing the Vietnam war to an end, thus decreasing military and intelligence spending, and faking a moon landing, thus decreasing funding to NASA. And remember, the two major sources of income for Home Land defense were war and space.

Nixon began a process counter to the secret government and Home Land defense, one of divesting the United States of its power and to bring us under the control of a world government through the United Nations. Nixon made numerous trips around the world, opened up China to the west, and began making peace with the Soviet Union. He then began a process of countering the secret government by creating new government agencies whose agendas would run counter to the goals of the secret government. Perhaps his most treasonous act against America was in selling off the savings account of America, our gold!

Meanwhile the secret government was not standing idle waiting for their demise, but neither did they react, they planned. And the main plan was not just to get rid of Nixon but to insure that another Nixon could never become President of the United States again. Enter the Bushes.

Before the Nixon faction knew what hit them, the military and intelligence communities created numerous scandals to bring them down. (Not many people remember that Bob Woodward from the Washington Post and Watergate fame resigned his commission as a Naval Intelligence Officer one day and the very next was working as a reporter for one of the most prestigious newspapers in the world.)

Within a few short years Nixon's Vice President had to resign due to a never-ending stream of corruption charges. He watched as one by one his administration either turned on him or were charged with crimes. He watched helplessly as his Presidency turned upside down and could see that the final outcome would be his impeachment.

But in a final act of desperation orchestrated by his master 'gods' he brought the world to the brink of nuclear war in October, 1973, but failed in this attempt when the military refused to give him access to the launch codes. And then, knowing his total defeat was at hand, he resigned his office.

What had happened to Nixon- and his minions was the direct result of an agreement between the secret government and the Bushes. After all, if anyone knew how to play this 'game', it was the Bush/Warburg family. They had after all been one of the major parties to the largest war in earth's modern history and were still standing.

So as Nixon was enduring his trial by fire, George Bush became a Congressman. As a freshman in Congress he was given the best committee choices so as to better pad his resume. The next 30 years would see him as Director of the CIA, Ambassador to China, Vice President, President, and the father of a President. But more than that, he was tasked with the plan to insure that the secret government would never again be faced with a Nixon.

To do that he first had to 'plan' the 1976 presidential election and choose an obscure former Naval military officer who was presently the Governor of Georgia, Jimmy Carter. Bush knew that a Democrat in the White House would appease the American public after the ordeal of Nixon's last years. And Carter like any good military officer knew how to take orders.

The first orders for Carter to carry out involved the cleaning out of both the military and intelligence communities of all of their Nixon/Kissinger spies. And to make sure the 'other' side knew how serious the secret government was in ferreting out these moles, wholesale leaks of secret documents became a everyday experience.

The bad guys fought back with everything they could. Russia invasion of a neighboring country? We didn't take the bait. The raising of oil prices? We didn't take the bait. The undermining of the American dollar? We didn't take the bait. The takeover of our embassy in Iran, the holding of our hostages? We didn't take the bait. What we were doing, however, was rebuilding our military forces, and in secret. We also were re-energizing NASA with billions for the space shuttle. In other words, the secret government was again being funded.

Both Carter and the secret government knew he could never be re-elected but it didn't matter because they all knew who was going to be the next President, and why.

The next strike against the secret government was the attempted assassination of Reagan, but not for the reason you'd expect. The actual target was not Reagan but Bush. The plan was to make the assassination look like a conspiracy headed by the Vice President. If the plan worked, not only would George Bush not be President, but also neither could his sons, or any of his network. But it didn't succeed and retribution was swift in coming, or as swift century old conspiracies usually work.

Though President Reagan is credited with the largest peacetime build up of US military forces, the beginning of the buildup actually began with President Carter. During the Carter administration the groundwork (research) was laid; under Reagan it was implemented.

Now the implementation of this 'plan' called for hitting the bad guys where it hurt the most, in their pocketbooks. Remember the recessions of the late 1970's and early 1980's? Remember the lines of thousands of unemployed workers? Remember too that Nixon had sold off our gold - so what could we fall back on? Well the answer was simple, debt!

During the Reagan administration we saw one of the largest rises in government and debt combined in our history. And the best part about it? It wasn't our debt! Remember what we talked about earlier? The debt of the US government isn't really ours; it's the Federal Reserve's, which again is not a government institution but a private bank.

So as we increased our debt load the bad guys were powerless to do anything because in taking us down they'd go down harder. Their only viable plan then became to destroy us militarily. But we were prepared for that too and began not only a military building spree, we actually started to use it.

From Lebanon, to Grenada, to Panama, to Iraq, and over 100 countries in-between, the 1980s saw a projection of military power unequalled since the days of the Roman Empire. And not only were we not challenged, there was no country on earth able to challenge us.

The 1980s also saw the secret government transporting the industrial might of the United States to every area of the globe. And where once we were the industrial might of the free world, but all of our capabilities were here, we then became an even greater industrial power with our manufacturing capability strategically placed around the world.

With the advent and rise of the Internet, the United States spent the better part of the 1990's transferring billions of dollars of economic and intellectual wealth, and with them jobs, to over 120 of the 189 countries in the world. Surprisingly to some, the largest US investments have been to the former Eastern European countries formally aligned with the Soviet Union.

And keep remembering, we haven't been doing this with our money but by utilizing the debt of the private Federal Reserve Banking System!

"The United States relies on the rest of the world to finance its public and private debts. But the markets worry about the unsustainable imbalances. The US may not be able to support its wild military spending much longer."

But you may ask, "What happens if we stop paying on our debt?" Well, before I answer that question you have to realize that we've already started not paying it!

TREASURY CALLS 9-1/8 PERCENT BONDS OF 2004-09
FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
January 15, 2004

"The Treasury today announced the call for redemption at par on May 15, 2004, of the 9-1/8 Treasury Bonds of 2004-I 09, originally issued May 15, 1979, due May 15, 2009 (CUSIP No. 912810CG1). There are $4,606 million of these bonds outstanding, of which $3,109 million are held by private investors. Securities not redeemed on May 15, 2004 will stop earning interest.

These bonds are being called to reduce the cost of debt financing. The 9-1/8 interest rate is significantly above the current cost of securing financing for the five years remaining to their maturity. In current market conditions. Treasury estimates that interest savings from the call and refinancing will be about $544 million. "

To fully understand the significance of this you've got to imagine yourself calling your mortgage company and saying, "Listen, I've gone over my budget and I've decided to stop paying the interest on my loan. This is going to save me $20,000.00 over the next five years. Thanks!"

Now, to answer the question of what happens. Money doesn't grow on trees, we know that, but it does come out of thin air. Let me explain. When you go to the bank and borrow $1000.00 and agree to pay 10 over one year the total of your loan amount is $1,100.00. The bank gives you the money and then they turn around and borrow from the Federal Reserve at a lower interest rate, let's say 3. So now, you've got $1,000.00, the bank has $70.00; the Federal Reserve gets $30.00. Figures are changed on the money supply ledger sheet and the money supply increases and your debt gets larger. (Remember too that is a very simplistic explanation on how the fractional reserve money system works and is not intended to be an exact example.) And it's a great system except when you don't pay back the money.

So now as we begin the year 2004 what does all this mean and how do we tie it all together? Well we frankly can't tie everything together but what we can do is put together enough of these puzzle pieces to get a glimpse of where we're at now and how you and I fit into this matrix.

Playing the Game the Secret Government Way

Though I could fill up this whole book, and may in fact write one on just this subject, with examples of how much we're being manipulated, there's one in particular that stands out. And it's called the Game of Guns.

But first I have to set the stage for the main player of this particular game, President Clinton. Now, love him or hate him you have to remember that he's part of the secret government and an important part of the Bush network.

He was elected to two terms as President with his first election win in 1992 against George Bush. Like Carter he was a Small State southern governor but unlike Carter he hadn't served in the military. But that didn't matter because he, and his wife, knew how to take orders.

Bush's plan, remember, was a 30+-year plan designed to keep the presidency in the hands of the secret government. He knew that he could be reelected in his own right in 1992 against Clinton, but to do so he then wouldn't have his son in office during the crucial years of 2001-2004. So Bush went to his good friend and fellow network member Ross Perot to run as an independent in the 1992 election. And the plan worked. With Perot in the race just enough votes were taken away from Bush to allow Clinton the win.

Now Clinton's role during the 1990's was to use the power of his office, and the government, to prepare the American people for the disasters soon to come in the early 21st Century. With one catch though, he couldn't tell us about it. So how could he do it? Well, back to guns now.

If you ask any 10 people right now, "Was President Clinton pro gun or anti gun?" how many do you think would answer pro | gun? Right, nobody. But, would it surprise you to learn that under Clinton the United States saw the largest increase in gun ownership in history? Well, let's look at some facts.

More Guns. Less Crime
(table omitted)

Since 1991 the nation's violent crime rate has decreased every year, 35 overall, to a 27-year low, according to the FBI. According to federal crime victim surveys, violent crime is at a 30-year low. Meanwhile, the number of privately owned guns, including hundreds of thousands of automatic weapons and nearly identical guns, has risen by about 60 million. The number of "large" magazines has risen by 50 million since 1994. Today, there are more guns and "large" magazines than ever.

Keep remembering too, this happened during the Clinton administration. So how did they do it?

The answer is in understanding human psychology and the use of those memes we talked about earlier. Let me explain. The meme was that guns were going to be taken away. The reaction to this meme was to make sure they weren't going to take YOUR gun away. And for those Americans who didn't have guns; they bought them. For those that had them already; they bought more. The demand for guns even exceeded the manufacturing capabilities of our nation's arms makers. Clinton's solution? Simple, he opened the floodgates for foreign arms and ammunition makers by abolishing almost all of the previously enacted laws on importing guns into the United States.

During the Clinton administration American citizens armed themselves with more guns and ammunition than all of the armies and all of the soldiers who fought in World War II. And he's called a liberal?

What's important to remember about this issue though is that I Clinton like Bush, and the whole network of the secret government, knew that the average American was not going to be protected from the disastrous effects of what is soon to befall us. But they also knew that a large minority of Americans would prepare and survive, and in surviving would need the means to protect themselves and their families.

But by far the most important contribution President Clinton made towards achieving the aims and goals of the secret government was in the building up and increasing the power of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, or FEMA.

Most people in government already refer to FEMA as the "secret government" of the United States. It is not an elected body, it does not involve itself in public disclosures, and it even has a quasi-secret budget in the billions of dollars.

This government organization has more power than the President of the United States or the Congress, it has the power to suspend laws, move entire populations, arrest and detain citizens without a warrant and hold them without trial, it can seize property, food supplies, transportation systems, and can suspend the Constitution.

Not only is it the most powerful entity in the United States, but it was not even created under Constitutional law by the Congress. It was a product of a Presidential Executive Order. In a deal with the secret government, Nixon consolidated Kennedy's Executive Orders in exchange for his being allowed to resign and not face prosecution. These were further refined by President Carter and given teeth during the Reagan, Bush, and Clinton Administrations. FEMA had one original concept when it was created, to assure the survivability of the United States government in the event of a nuclear attack on this nation. It was also provided with the task of being a federal coordinating body during times of domestic disasters, such as earthquakes, floods and hurricanes.

FEMA has even been given control of the State Defense Forces, militia, which is the civilian army that would substitute for the National Guard, if the Guard is called to duty overseas, like in Iraq. It must be remembered too that all able bodied men in the United States between the ages of 15-49 are members of the militia under provisions outlined in the constitution. And according to the CIA in their World Fact Book, the military manpower availability for the US males age 15-49 is 73,597,731.

Though it may be the most powerful organization in the United States, few people know it even exists. But it has crept into our private lives. Even mortgage papers contain FEMA's name in small print if the property in question is near a flood plain.

FEMA was deeply involved in the Los Angeles riots and the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake in the San Francisco Bay Area. Perhaps most surprising was that FEMA was on location in New York City during 911, the day prior to the attacks.

Some of the black helicopter traffic reported throughout the United States, but mainly in the West, California, Washington, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas and Colorado, is flown by FEMA personnel. FEMA has been given responsibility for many new disasters including urban forest fires, home heating emergencies, refugee situations, urban riots, and emergency planning for nuclear and toxic incidents. In the West, it works in conjunction with the Sixth Army.

As I had stated before, FEMA was created by a series of Executive Orders. A Presidential Executive Order, whether Constitutional or not, becomes law simply by its publication in the Federal Register. Congress is by-passed.

Executive Order Number 12148 created the Federal Emergency Management Agency to interface with the Department of Defense for civil defense planning and funding. An "emergency czar" was appointed. FEMA has only spent about 6 percent of its budget on national emergencies; the bulk of their funding has been used for the construction of secret underground facilities to assure continuity of government in the case of a major emergency, foreign or domestic.

Executive Order Number 12656 appointed the National Security Council as the principal body that should consider emergency powers. This allows the government to increase domestic intelligence and surveillance of U.S. citizens and would restrict the freedom of movement within the United States and grant the government the right to isolate large groups of civilians. The National Guard could be federalized to seal all borders and take control of U.S. air space and all ports of entry.

Here are just a few Executive Orders associated with FEMA that would suspend the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. These Executive Orders have been on record for nearly 30 years and could be enacted by the stroke of a presidential pen at any time:

EXECUTIVE ORDER 10990 allows the government to take over all modes of transportation and control of highways and seaports.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 10995 allows the government to seize and control the communication media.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 10997 allows the government to take over all electrical power, gas, petroleum, fuels and minerals.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 10998 allows the government to take over all food resources and farms.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 11000 allows the government to mobilize civilians into work brigades under government supervision.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 11001 allows the government to take over all health, education and welfare functions.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 11002 designates the Postmaster General to operate a national registration of all persons.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 11003 allows the government to take over all airports and aircraft, including commercial aircraft.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 11004 allows the Housing and Finance Authority to relocate communities, build new housing with public funds, designate areas to be abandoned, and establish new locations for populations.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 11005 allows the government to take over railroads, inland waterways and public storage facilities.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 11051 specifies the responsibility of the Office of Emergency Planning and gives authorization to put all Executive Orders into effect in times of increased international tensions and economic or financial crisis.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 11310 grants authority to the Department of Justice to enforce the plans set out in Executive Orders, to institute industrial support, to establish judicial and legislative liaison, to control all aliens, to operate penal and correctional institutions, and to advise and assist the President.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 11049 assigns emergency preparedness function to federal departments and agencies, consolidating 21 operative Executive Orders issued over a fifteen-year period.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 11921 allows the Federal Emergency Preparedness Agency to develop plans to establish control over the mechanisms of production and distribution, of energy sources, wages, salaries, credit and the flow of money in U.S. financial institutions in any undefined national emergency. It also provides that when a state of emergency is declared by the President, Congress cannot review the action for six months.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency has broad power; in every aspect of the nation. General Frank Salzedo, chief of FEMA's Civil Security Division stated in a 1983 conference that he saw FEMA's role as a "new frontier in the protection of individual and governmental leaders from assassination, am of civil and military installations from sabotage and/or attack as well as prevention of dissident groups from gaining access to U.S. opinion, or a global audience in times of crisis."

FEMA's powers were consolidated by President Carter to incorporate:

The National Security Act of 1947, which allows for the strategic relocation of industries, services, government and other essential economic activities, and to rationalize the requirements for manpower, resources and production facilities;

The 1950 Defense Production Act, which gives the President sweeping powers over all aspects of the economy;

The Act of August 29, 1916, which authorizes the Secretary of the Army, in time of war, to take possession of and transportation system for transporting troops, material, or any other purpose related to the emergency; and

The International Emergency Economic Powers Act, which enables the President to seize the property of a foreign country or national.

These powers were transferred to FEMA in a sweeping consolidation in 1979.

FEMA's deceptive role really did not come to light with much of the public until Hurricane Andrew smashed into the U.S. mainland. As Russell R. Dynes, director of the Disaster Research Center of the University of Delaware, wrote in his book. The World and I, "...The eye of the political storm I hovered over the Federal Emergency Management Agency. FEMA became a convenient target for criticism."

Because FEMA was accused of dropping the ball in Florida, the media and Congress commenced to study this agency. What came out of the critical look was that FEMA was spending 12 times more for "black operations" than for disaster relief. It spent $1.3 billion building secret bunkers throughout the United States in anticipation of government disruption by foreign or domestic upheaval. Yet fewer than 20 members of Congress, only members with top security clearance, know of the $1.3 billion expenditure by FEMA for non-natural disaster situations. These few congressional leaders state that FEMA has a "black curtain" around its operations. FEMA has worked on National Security programs since 1979, and its predecessor, the Federal Emergency Preparedness Agency, has secretly spent millions of dollars before being merged into FEMA by President Carter in 1979.

FEMA has developed 300 sophisticated mobile units that are capable of sustaining themselves for a month. The vehicles are located in five areas of the United States. They have tremendous communication systems and each contains a generator that I would provide power to 120 homes each, but have never been used for disaster relief.

FEMA's enormous powers can be triggered easily. In any form of domestic or foreign problem, perceived and not always actual, emergency powers can be enacted. The President of the United States now has broader powers to declare martial law, which activates FEMA's extraordinary powers. Martial law can be declared during time of increased tension overseas, economic problems within the United States, such as a depression, civil unrest, such as demonstrations or scenes like the Los Angeles riots, and in the event of a pending cataclysmic event.

These Presidential powers have increased with successive Crime Bills, particularly the 1991 and 1993 Crime Bills, and the passing of the Patriot Act, which increased the power to suspend the rights guaranteed under the Constitution and to seize property of those suspected of being drug dealers, to individuals who participate in a public protest or demonstration.

Under emergency plans already in existence, the power exists to suspend the Constitution and turn over the reins of government to FEMA and appoint military commanders to run state and local governments. FEMA then would have the right to order the detention of anyone whom there is reasonable ground to believe...will engage in, or probably conspire with others to engage in acts of espionage or sabotage. The plan also authorized the establishment of concentration camps for detaining the accused, but no trial.

Three times since 1984, FEMA stood on the threshold of taking control of the nation. Once under President Reagan in 1984, and twice under President Bush in 1990 and 1992. But under those three scenarios, there was not a sufficient crisis to warrant risking martial law. Most experts on the subject of FEMA and Martial Law insisted that a crisis has to appear dangerous enough for the people of the United States before they would tolerate or accept complete government takeover. The typical crisis needed would be threat of imminent nuclear war, rioting in several U.S. cities simultaneously, a series of national disasters that affect widespread danger to the populous, massive terrorist attacks, a depression in which tens of millions are unemployed and without financial resources, or a major environmental disaster.

In April 1984, President Reagan signed Presidential Directive Number 54 that allowed FEMA to engage in a secret national "readiness exercise" under the code name of REX 84. The exercise was to test FEMA's readiness to assume military authority in the event of a "State of Domestic National Emergency" concurrent with the launching of a direct United States military operation in Central America. The plan called for the deputation of U.S. military and National Guard units so that they could legally be used for domestic law enforcement. These units would be assigned to conduct sweeps and take into custody an estimated 400,000 undocumented Central American immigrants in the United States. The immigrants would be interned at 10 detention centers to be set up at military bases throughout the country.

REX 84 was so highly guarded that special metal security doors were placed on the fifth floor of the FEMA building in Washington, D.C. Even long-standing employees of the Civil Defense of the Federal Executive Department possessing the highest possible security clearances were not being allowed through the newly installed metal security doors. Only personnel wearing a special red Christian cross or crucifix lapel pin were allowed into the premises.

Lt. Col. Oliver North was responsible for drawing up the emergency plan, which U.S. Attorney General William French Smith opposed vehemently. The plan called for the suspension of the Constitution, turning control of the government over to FEMA, appointment of military commanders to run state and local governments and the declaration of Martial Law. The Presidential Executive Orders to support such a plan were already in place. The plan also advocated the rounding up and transfer to "assembly centers or relocation camps" of a least 21 j million American Negroes in the event of massive rioting or disorder, not unlike the rounding up of the Jews in Nazi Germany in the 1930s.

The second known time that FEMA stood by was in 1990 when Desert Storm was enacted. Prior to President Bush's invasion of Iraq, FEMA began to draft new legislation to increase its already formidable powers. One of the elements incorporated into the plan was to set up operations within any state or locality without the prior permission of local or state authorities. Such prior permission has always been required in the past.

Much of the mechanism being set into place was in anticipation of the economic collapse of the Western World. Remember, the war with Iraq was conceived as a demonstration of our powers for the benefit of our enemies.

The third scenario for FEMA came with the Los Angeles riots after the Rodney King brutality verdict. Had the rioting spread to other cities, FEMA would have been empowered to step in. As it was, major rioting only occurred in the Los Angeles area, thus preventing a pretext for a FEMA response.

On July 5, 1987, the Miami Herald published reports on FEMA's new goals. The goal was to suspend the Constitution in the event of a national crisis, such as nuclear war, violent and widespread internal dissent, or national opposition to a U.S. military invasion abroad. Lt. Col. North was the architect. National Security Directive Number 52 issued in August 1982, pertains to the "Use of National Guard Troops to Quell Disturbances."

FEMA has the power to turn the United States into a police state in time of a real crisis or a manufactured crisis. The secret government virtually established the apparatus for dictatorship. Intelligence reports also indicate that FEMA has a folder with an additional 22 Executive Orders for the President to sign in case of an emergency.

The most shining example of America to the world has been its peaceful transition of government from one administration to another. Despite crises of great magnitude, the United States has maintained its freedom and liberty. This nation now stands on the threshold of rule by non-elected people asserting non-Constitutional powers. Even Congress cannot review a Martial Law action until six months after it has been declared. For the first time in American history, the reins of government would not be transferred from one elected element to another, but the Constitution, itself, can be suspended.

The scenarios established to trigger FEMA into action are generally found in society today, economic collapse, civil unrest, drug problems, terrorist attacks, and protests against American intervention in a foreign country. All these premises exist; it could only be a matter of time in which one of these triggers the entire emergency necessary to bring FEMA into action. Remember too that under the FEMA plan, there is no contingency by which Constitutional power is restored.

But it is very interesting that in a document titled, A Nation Prepared, Federal Emergency Management Agency Strategic Plan Fiscal Years 2003 - 2008, FEMA states:

"As the Nation faces the risks associated with changing weather patterns, violent storms, sudden earthquakes, and the aftermath of terrorist attacks, the demand for emergency management information is ever increasing. FEMA will serve as the Nation's portal for emergency management information before, during, and after disaster strikes. As a portal FEMA is not the originator of all information, nor is it the only source of information. Rather, FEMA will provide a single entry point through which users can access a broad spectrum of relevant emergency management information. This effort will take several forms and will require that FEMA become a knowledge manager with responsibility for coordinating and integrating the broad spectrum of emergency management information available to government and the public. As part of this new role, FEMA will ensure that the Federal government speaks to the public with a single, coordinated voice in times of disaster and national emergency."

Now think about this for moment, "As the Nation faces the risks associated with changing weather patterns, violent storms, sudden earthquakes...", they say but when was the last time you heard any public official talk openly about this? What do 'they' know that we don't?

What Every Rabbit Knows, Dig Deep

"Then the kings of the earth and the great men and the generals and the rich and the strong, and every one, slave and free, hid in the caves and among the rocks of the mountains, calling to the mountains and rocks, "Fall on us and hide us from the face of him who is seated on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great day of their wrath has come, and who can stand before it?" Revelation 6:15-17

As we've already discussed one of FEMA's prime duties over the past 30 years has been to construct and equip a vast network of underground bases and facilities throughout the United States and around the world. And a place called Mount Weather is their base of operations for the carrying out of this massive project.

Now few Americans are even aware of the existence of Mount Weather, a mysterious underground military base carved deep inside a mountain near the sleepy rural town of Bluemont, Virginia. Located just 46 miles from Washington DC, Mount Weather, also known as the Western Virginia Office of Controlled Conflict Operations, is buried not just in hard granite, but in secrecy as well.

In March 1976, The Progressive Magazine published an astonishing article entitled The Mysterious Mountain. The author, Richard Pollock based his investigative report on Senate subcommittee hearings and upon "several off-the-recon interviews with officials formerly associated with Mourn Weather." His report, and a 1991 article in Time Magazine entitled Domsday Hideaway, supply a few compelling hints about what is going on underground.

Ted Gup, writing for Time Magazine, describes the base as follows: "Mount Weather is a virtually self-contained facility. Above ground, scattered across manicured lawns, are about a dozen buildings bristling with antennas and microwave relay systems. An on-site sewage-treatment plant, with a 90,000 gal.-a-day capacity, and two tanks holding 250,000 gal. of water could last some 200 people more than a month; underground ponds hold additional water supplies. Not far from the installation's entry gate are a control tower and a helicopter pad. The mountain's real secrets are not visible at ground level."

Warning signs, 10 foot-high chain link fences, razor wire, and armed guards protects the mountain's real secrets. Curious motorists and hikers on the Appalachian Trail are relieved of their sketching pads and cameras and sent on their way. Security is tight.

The government has owned the site since 1903, and it has seen service as an artillery range, a hobo farm during the Depression, and a National Weather Bureau Facility. In 1936, the U.S. Bureau of Mines took control of the site and started digging.

Mount Weather is virtually an underground city, according to former personnel interviewed by Pollock. Buried deep inside the earth, Mount Weather is equipped with such amenities as:

- private apartments and dormitories
- streets and sidewalks
- cafeterias and hospitals
- a water purification system, power plant and general office buildings
- a small lake fed by fresh water from underground springs
- its own mass transit system
- a TV communication system

Mount Weather's purpose is to be the self-sustaining underground command center for the FEMA. The facility is also the operational center of approximately 100 other Federal Relocation Centers, most of which are concentrated in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Virginia, Maryland and North Carolina. Together this network of underground facilities constitutes the backbone of America's "Continuity of Government" program.

In the event of a disaster the President, his cabinet and the rest of the Executive Branch would be "relocated" to Mount Weather.

According to the Senate Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights hearings in 1975, Congress has almost no knowledge and no oversight, budgetary or otherwise, on Mount Weather. Retired Air Force General Leslie W. Bray, in his testimony to the subcommittee, said, "I am not at liberty to describe precisely what is the role and the mission and the capability that we have at Mount Weather, or at any other precise location."

Apparently, this underground capital of the United States is a secret only to Congress and the US taxpayers that paid for it. The Russians know about it, as reported in Time Magazine: "Few in the U.S. government will speak of it, though it is assumed that all along the Soviets have known both its precise location and its mission (unlike the Congress, since Bray wouldn't tell); defense experts take it as a given that the site is on the Kremlin's targeting maps. " The Russians attempted to buy real estate right next door, as a "country estate" for their embassy folks, but that deal was dead-ended by the State Department.

Pollock's report, based on his interviews with former officials at Mount Weather, contains astounding information on the base's personnel. The underground city contains a parallel government-in-waiting: "High- level Governmental sources, speaking in the promise of strictest anonymity, told me [Pollock] that each of the Federal departments represented at Mount Weather is headed by a single person on whom is conferred the rank of a Cabinet-level official. Protocol demands that subordinates address them as 'Mr. Secretary.' Each of the Mount Weather 'Cabinet members' is apparently appointed by the White House and serves an indefinite term ... many through several Administrations. The facility attempts to duplicate the vital functions of the Executive branch of the Administration."

Nine Federal departments are replicated within Mount Weather (Agriculture; Commerce; Health, Education & Welfare; Housing & Urban Development; Interior; Labor; State; Transportation; and Treasury) as well as at least six Federal agencies (Homeland Security, Federal Communications Commission, Selective Service, Federal Power Commission, Civil Service Commission, and the Veterans Administration). The Federal Reserve and the U.S. Post Office, both private corporations, also have offices in Mount Weather.

Pollock writes that the "cabinet members" are "apparently" appointed by the White House and serve an indefinite term, but that information cannot be confirmed, raising the further question of who holds the reins on this "back-up government." Furthermore, appointed Mount Weather officials hold their positions through several elected administrations, transcending the time their appointers spend in office. Unlike other presidential nominees, these appointments are made without the public advice or consent of the Senate.

A Senate Subcommittee in 1975 learned that the facility held dossiers on at least 100,000 Americans. Senator John Tunney later alleged that the Mount Weather computers can obtain millions of pieces of additional information on the personal lives of American citizens simply by tapping the data stored at any of the other ninety-six Federal Relocation Centers.

An article in the Progressive Magazine stated that "General Bray gave Tunney's subcommittee a list of the categories of files maintained at Mount Weather: military installations, government facilities, communications, transportation, energy and power, agriculture, manufacturing, wholesale and retail services, manpower, financial, medical and educational institutions, sanitary facilities, population, housing shelter, and stockpiles." This massive database fits cleanly into Mount Weather's ultimate purpose as the command center in the event of a national emergency.

The main daily activity of the approximately 240 people who work at Mount Weather is to play disaster games. The games are intended to train the Mount Weather bureaucracy to managing a wide range of problems associated with disasters, war and domestic political crises. Decisions are made in the "Situation Room," the base's nerve center, located in the core of Mount Weather.

The Situation Room is the archetypal war room, with "charts, maps and whatever visuals may be needed" and "batteries of communications equipment connecting Mount Weather with the White House and 'Raven Rock', the underground Pentagon sixty miles north of Washington, as well as with almost every US military unit stationed around the globe," according to the Progressive article. "All internal communications are conducted by closed-circuit color television... senior officers and 'Cabinet members' have two consoles recessed in the walls of their office."

Every year there is a system-wide alert that "includes all military and civilian-run underground installations." The real, aboveground President and his Cabinet members are "relocated" to Mount Weather to observe the simulation. Post-mortems are conducted and the margins for error are calculated after the games. All the data is studied and documented.

In its 1974 Annual Report, FEMA stated that "Studies conducted at Mount Weather involve the control and management of domestic political unrest where there are material shortages (such as food riots) or in strike situations where the FPA determines that there are industrial disruptions and other domestic resource crises."

The Mount Weather facility uses a vast array of resources to continually monitor the American people too. According to Daniel J. Cronin, former assistant director for the FPA, Reconnaissance satellites, local and state police intelligence reports, and Federal law enforcement agencies are just a few of the resources available to the FPA [now FEMA] for information gathering. "We try to monitor situations and get to them before they become emergencies," Cronin said. "No expense is spared in the monitoring program."

Using all the data generated by the disaster games and domestic crisis scenarios, the facility continually maintains and updates a list of names and addresses of people deemed to be "vital" to the survival of the nation, or who can "assist essential and non-interruptible services." In the 1976 article, the "survivors list" contained 6,500 names, but even that was deemed to be low. Technological advances since then, coupled with the passing of the Patriot Act after 911 have now led to speculation that the "survivors list" contains over 130,000 names.

At the same time tens of millions of dollars were being spent on maintaining and upgrading the complex to protect several hundred designated officials in the event of disaster, the US government drastically reduced its emphasis on war preparedness for US citizens. A 1989 FEMA brochure entitled 'Are You Prepared?' suggests that citizens construct makeshift fallout shelters using used furniture, books, and other common household items. After 911 we were told to stock up on duct tape too.

Officially, Mount Weather, and its budget, does not exist. FEMA refuses to answer inquiries about the facility; as FEMA spokesman Bob Blair told Time magazine, "I'll be glad to tell you all about it, but I'd have to kill you afterward."

We don't know how much Mount Weather has cost over the years, but of course, American taxpayers bear this burden as well. A Christian Science Monitor article entitled "Study Reveals US Has Spent $4 Trillion on Nukes Since '45" reports that "The government devoted at least $12 billion to civil defense projects to protect the population from nuclear attack. But billions of dollars more were secretly spent on vast underground complexes from which civilian and military officials would run the government during a nuclear war."

Mount Weather contains an unelected, parallel "government-in-waiting" ready to take control of the United States upon word from the President or his successor. The facility also contains a massive database of information on U.S. citizens, which is operated with no safeguards or accountability. Ostensibly, this expensive hub of America's network of subterranean bases was designed to preserve our form of government during a nuclear | holocaust or other such cataclysmic event.

But Mount Weather is not simply a Cold War holdover. Information on command and control strategies during national emergencies has largely been withheld from the American public. Executive Order 11051, signed by President Kennedy in 1962, states that "national preparedness must be achieved... as may be required to deal with increases in international tension with limited war, or with general war including attack upon the United States."

However, Executive Order 11490 tells a different story. EO 11490, which superceded Kennedy's EO 11051, begins, "Whereas our national security is dependent upon our ability to assure continuity of government, at every level, in any national emergency type situation that might conceivably confront the nation."

As researcher William Cooper points out, this order makes no reference to "war," "imminent attack," or "general war." These quantifiers are replaced by an extremely vague "national emergency type situation" that "might conceivably" interfere with the workings of the national power structure. Furthermore, there is no publicly known Executive Order outlining the restoration of the Constitution after a national emergency has ended. Unless the parallel government at Mount Weather does decide to return power to Constitutional authority, the United States could experience a coup d'etat posing as a national emergency. And remember too that a good case can be made that this is exactly what happened on September 11, 2001.

Like the enigmatic Area 51 in Nevada, the Federal government wants to keep the Mount Weather facility buried in secrecy. Public awareness of this place and its purpose would raise serious questions about who holds the reins of power in this country. The Constitution states that those reins lie in the hands of the people, but the very existence of Mount Weather indicates an entirely different reality.

And far from Mount Weather being the only underground facility of the secret government, it is but one of hundreds! Let's take a few minutes and look at another one, Denver International Airport.

An African woman in colorful native garb; a Native American woman who's heritage the airport's art supposedly celebrates; a blonde girl with cupid bow lips, a Star of David on her chest and a bible in her hands. Each lay dead in open coffins for your viewing pleasure. A burning city, children sleeping on piles of bricks, a line of mourning women in rags with dead babies, limp in their arms. A huge, looming military figure in a gas mask brandishes a sword and machine gun. Part of an actual note written by a child interred in a Nazi death camp. Strange words embedded in the floor with no explanation about what they mean. Welcome to Denver International Airport!

That's just the part you see up close, though. What you don't see are 8 sub-basements, low- and high- frequency sounds that make people sick, air vents jutting out of the surrounding ban-en acres of fenced lots that have barbed wire along their tops -pointing in. Whole buildings that were constructed below ground level and then buried as is, the excuse being they were "built wrong".

An entire runway constructed, then buried under a layer of dirt and "forgotten". The layers of workers and companies who were fired so that no one would have a Big Picture. And workers even reported seeing aliens working there.

The airport was built in 1995 on 34,000 acres (53 square miles; 137.593 Sq. km) in spite of the fact that Denver already had what everyone said was a perfectly fine airport, Stapleton, which was ordered closed when Denver International Airport (DIA) was built so there "wouldn't be any competition". In fact the new airport has less gates and less runways than Stapleton did. All it does have is a lot more acreage. More acreage than an airport that size could possibly need. Most of which sits unused. They say it's in case they need to do any future expansion. DIA is the 7th busiest airport in the US according to a 2002 Grain's Chicago Business report.

The initial cost of DIA was to be 1.7 billion dollars but by the time they were done it cost about $4.8 billion. Words used to describe the DIA were "buried in technical problems", "poor project management", "overwhelming complexity" and "America's most inconvenient airport". It was built in a high wind area (Stapleton hadn't been) that causes it to be shut down or flights delayed often. The extensive automated baggage system was so messed up, such a circus of errors that it was worse than unusable - it was an industry joke.

Now let's look at some interesting facts about DIA.

Even though the area is basically flat (with a stunning view of mountains all around, since it's in a valley), a large expense of time and money was taken to extensively lower some areas and raise others. They moved 110 million cubic yards of earth around. This is about 1/3rd of the amount of earth they moved when they dug out the Panama Canal.

The airport has a fiber optic communications core made of 5,300 miles of cable. That's longer than the Nile River. That's from New York City to Buenos Aires, Argentina. The airport also has 11,365 miles of copper cable communications network.

The fueling system can pump 1,000 gallons of jet fuel per minute through a 28-mile network of pipes. There are six fuel holding tanks that each hold 2.73 million gallons of jet fuel. This is somewhere in the "no one will ever need this much" range.

Granite was imported from all over the world - Asia, Africa, Europe, North and South America - and used in making the main terminal floor. This is a seemingly ridiculous expense, especially when you're already over budget. They say, "The floor pattern echoes the roof design and subtly reinforces passenger flows". (Subliminal messages to keep panicked people moving.)

The huge, main terminal is Jeppesen Terminal, named after Elfrey Jeppesen, who was the first person to create maps specifically for aviation (the company is still in business today). This area is known as the "Great Hall"; it's said this is what the Masons name their meeting place. It is 900 feet by 210 feet. This is over 1.5 million square feet of space. All told, there is over 6 million square feet of public space at DIA.

The airport brags that they have room to build another terminal and two more concourses and could serve 100 million passengers a year. The airport flew 36 million in 2001.

The only way to get to the other two concourses/terminals from the Great Hall, or vice versa, is via the airport's train system. There are more than 19 miles (30 km) of conveyor belt track, luggage transport cars and road in their own underground tunnels that move baggage and goods. They're so huge you can drive trucks through them, and some remain unused.

The entire roof of DIA is made of 15 acres of Teflon-coated, woven fiberglass. The same material is on the inside as a layer, also. The place looks like a bizarre scene out of "Dune", comprised of huge, spiked tent-like structures. The material reflects 90% of the sunlight and doesn't conduct heat. So you can't see into the place with radar or see heat signatures.

It's important at this point to understand some information from this report:

"Technology for the United States Navy and Marine Corps, 2000-2035

Becoming a 21st-century Force" Volume 9: Modeling and Simulation

3 Potential Failures and Disasters for DOD's M&S Broad Observations: Intellectual and Technological Infrastructure Complex Systems and the Need for Humility"

..."The study's terms of reference (Appendix A) asked for an identification of "present and emerging technologies that relate to the full breadth of Navy and Marine Corps mission capabilities," with specific attention to "(I) information warfare, electronic warfare, and the use of surveillance assets;.....The study should review the overall architecture of models and simulation in the DoD (DoN, JCS, and OSD), the ability of the models to represent real world situations, and their merits as tools upon which to make technical and force composition decisions....This increased complexity means that it will be harder to design systems and to predict their behavior. Some might argue that in the engineering domain, modern design tools should overcome these difficulties. While there certainly have been impressive advances (e.g., in computer-aided design), there is a feeling with at least some members of the engineering community interviewed in the course of the study that they have nearly reached the limits of complexity that can be addressed with current tools and methods. Challenging examples that could lie beyond current approaches include future generation networks and very large scale integrated circuits. Indications of the difficulty of building complex engineering systems are given by some of the well-known "disasters "-explosion of the Ariane missile, inability to build a next-generation air-traffic control system, outages in telephone and power systems, and even the problems with the baggage handling system at the Denver airport."

The DIA does push the "limit of complexity" because it was deliberately designed to be such a complex monster. It's not as if some engineering problem was posed and met like the Chunnel, the Petrova Towers in Malaysia, the Burj Al Arab hotel in Dubai or a hydroelectric dam. So why would the military care about the baggage problems the airport had? If you believe what you are told in the papers, most of the problem was because the people who built the system weren't the ones that were awarded the contract to run the thing. Hardly any "engineering" snafu. Or did their billion dollar underground base not work out as well as they had hoped?

But when looked at from the vantage point of DIA being used in an emergency situation as the central hub to relocate hundreds of thousands of people from all around the United States into numerous underground installations, along with their personal effects, and on very short notice, another piece to the puzzle falls into place! So let's dig a little deeper into this.

One of the earliest American underground facilities was built at Raven Rock in Pennsylvania. The military refer to it as "Site R." It appears that "Section D." Raven Rock was picked because it is made of greenstone, a type of granite that is the fourth hardest rock on earth.

Construction started in 1950, and engineers had completed a series of tunnels and a three-story building by 1953. Two more three-story buildings were completed by 1963. The complex lies 650 feet beneath the 1,529-foot-high summit of Raven Rock and can be entered through four portals. The mountain has everything needed to survive a catastrophe: cars, some of the best dining in the Army, chemical suits, a fitness center, a medical facility, barbershop, legal services, a chapel, designated smoking areas and a convenience store.

It has six 1,000-kilowatt generators and 35 miles of cable on 180 telephone poles. Remember that this is one of the early underground sites, and probably does not compare with some of the new underground cities that have been constructed in more recent years.

There are also persistent rumors that an underground city exists under the Enchantment Resort in Boynton Canyon in Sedona, Arizona.

According to the Napa Sentinel, a secret underground installation is under construction near the Oakville Grade in Napa County, California, and is being used by the Government for direct satellite communication, the Continuity of Government (COG) program in case of nuclear attack or other disasters, and secure communication links with the outside world in case of disaster. Mysterious helicopter flights have been seen going into and out of the area. Supposedly, the secret government site is replacing other installations and combining them into one underground center.

Not all underground sites are shelters either. The Yucca Mountain Site Characterization Project took a first step in November 1993 when it started construction on the entrance pad for its Exploratory Studies Facility (ESF). This pad is the launching point for 14 miles of tunnels that will be drilled directly under Yucca Mountain. The tunnels will measure 24-30 feet in diameter for some and 16-18 feet in diameter for others. This project will eventually cover some 70 acres of surface and underground facilities. This DOE project will contain alcoves for experiments located along the tunnels.

Skeptics have expressed doubts about the existence of extensive underground tunneling and cavitation. They always ask "Where is all the dirt?" (This method of asking a question to disprove an allegation is misleading and faulty logic at best by the way.)

Well, one of the new methods of tunneling that has been under study is "nuclear tunnel boring." U.S. Patent No. 3,693,731 dated Sept. 26, 1972 describes a method and apparatus for tunneling by melting. It says, "a machine and method for drilling bore holes and tunnels by melting in which a housing is provided for supporting a heat source and a heated end portion and in which the necessary melting heat is delivered to the walls of the end portion at a rate sufficient to melt rock and during operation of which the molten material may be disposed adjacent the boring zone in cracks in the rock and as a vitreous wall lining of the tunnel so formed. The heat source can be electrical or nuclear, but for deep drilling is preferably a nuclear reactor." The melted rock is forced into cracks wherein heat is given up to the crack surfaces and freezes as a glass at some distance from the penetrator. This amazing boring device is capable of drilling at depths totally inaccessible with previous drilling techniques, even, according to the patent claims, down to 30,000 meters.

Scientists and engineers at Los Alamos invented the nuclear tunnel boring machines. They named their new machine, the "Subterrene." In 1975, A. A. Mathews, Inc did a cost comparison between the Subterrene and other tunneling methods. This report reveals that the initial experiments utilizing this technology were done in the early 1960s. This study reveals that the Subterrene performs its job rapidly and economically. The report states that the economy comes from "the formation of a glass lining bonded to the ground and capable of providing initial and final ground support without the delay and cost of separate installations. The use of a nuclear reactor and heat pipes to provide power for kerf penetration within the tunneling machine itself contributes to the overall economy of the system and is considered exclusively in this study. Nuclear power is not, however, a requirement for Subterrene tunneling." In fact, a Los Alamos symposium held in Atlantic City in 1986 proposed the construction of a Subterrene for tunnel melting for high-speed lunar subsurface transportation tunnels.

There are numerous witnesses who speak about a subterranean highway through America just like our own Interstate highway system, except it's underground. It seems this underground highway uses trucks, cars, and buses driven by electric motors. (You wouldn't want gasoline fumes polluting tunnels.) They also mention another style of transport for freight and passengers that are linked together in a worldwide network called the "Sub-Global System." It has checkpoints at each country entry. There are shuttle tubes that "shoot" the trains at incredible speed using a maglev and vacuum method. They travel in excess of the speed of sound.

Engineers Robert Salter and Frank P. Davidson of MIT have both discussed and given papers on the Planetran concept for moving people rapidly underground. Salter describes the Planetran as an ultraspeed, electromagnetically propelled and levitated transportation system of the future. Such a system could carry passengers across the United States in less than an hour in a quiet, economical, fuel-conservative, and nonpolluting manner. Planetran would require a tunnel over 2,500 miles in length, perhaps assembled from 100 25-mile long segments.

Now, my story isn't about everything having to do with underground bases and rail systems, I'm just giving you an overview and, again, I've included a number of great books for you if you'd like to learn more about this. But before we leave this subject let's take a look at who else has been digging in the dirt.

Aviation Week and Space Technology recently reported that "It seems the nearly $30 billion a year spent on intelligence hasn't answered the question of what the Russians are up to at Yamantau Mountain in the Urals. The huge underground complex being built there has been the object of U.S. interest since 1992. 'We don't know exactly what it is,' says Ashton Carter, the Pentagon's international security mogul. The facility is not operational, and the Russians have offered 'nonspecific reassurances' that it poses no threat to the U.S."

Starting in the Brezhnev period, Russia has been pursuing construction of a massive underground facility at Yamantau Mountain and the city of Mezhgorye (formerly the settlements of Beloretsk-15 and Beloretsk-16). Russia's 1997 federal budget lists the project as a closed territory containing installations of the Ministry of Defense.

On April 16, 1996, the New York Times reported on a mysterious military base being constructed in Russia:

"In a secret project reminiscent of the chilliest days of the Cold War, Russia is building a mammoth underground military complex in the Ural Mountains, Western officials and Russian witnesses say. Hidden inside Yamantau Mountain in the Beloretsk area of the southern Urals, the project involved the creation of a huge complex, served by a railroad, a highway, and thousands of workers."

The complex, being built inside Yamantau Mountain by tens of thousands of workers, covers an area the size of the Washington DC area inside the Beltway. There are reportedly provisions for living inside the man-made caves. There is an underground warehouse for food and clothing, a shelter for the Russian national leadership in case of disaster.

It is now known that the Soviet Union used secret underground bases in Eastern Europe to conceal nuclear missiles at the end of the Cold War, as an integral part of its nuclear war-fighting strategy. In all, some 73 SS-23 missiles, packing a nuclear punch 365 times greater than the bomb that detonated over Hiroshima, were hidden by the Soviets in violation of the INF Treaty, which went into force in June 1988.

If war had broken out those missiles would have given the Soviets an overwhelming strategic advantage against the United States, allowing them to decimate NATO forces in Europe in a surprise attack. The last of these missiles will be destroyed by the government of Slovakia, under a grant from the United States.

Today, Russia may be conducting deception on a far vaster scale beneath Yamantau Mountain, where it has dug out a gigantic underground military complex designed to withstand anything, including a sustained nuclear assault. A U.S. intelligence source was quoted as saying that the Yamantau complex is but one of some 200 secret deep underground sites in Russia, many of which have been significantly upgraded over the past six years at a cost of billions of dollars.

Since the end of the Cold War in 1991, U.S. intelligence sources believe the Russian government has pumped more than $6 billion into Yamantau alone, to construct a sprawling underground complex that spans some 400 square miles. In 1998, in a rare public comment, then-Commander of the U.S. Strategic Command (STRATCOM) Gen. Eugene Habinger, called Yamantau "...a very large complex — we estimate that it has millions of square feet available for underground facilities. We don't have a clue as to what they're doing there."

It is believed to be large enough to house 60,000 persons, with a special air filtration system designed to withstand a nuclear, chemical or biological attack. Enough food and water is believed to be stored at the site to sustain the entire underground population for months on end. "The only potential use for this site is post-nuclear war or a comet hitting earth..." US Rep. Roscoe Bartlett. Bartlett is one of a handful of members of Congress who have closely followed the Yamantau project.

In response to repeated U.S. inquiries, the Russian governor has provided no fewer than 12 separate and contradictor explanations for the site, none of them believed to be credible.

A 1997 Congressional Research Service report said that the vast sums invested to build the Yamantau Mountain complex "provide evidence of excessive military modernization in Russia." Russia is pouring money into this and other underground nuclear sites at the same time U.S. taxpayers have provided billions of dollars in aid to Russia to help dismantle nuclear warheads taken off line as a result of START I and START II.

"Yamantau Mountain is the largest nuclear-secure project in the world... They have very large train tracks running in and out of it, with enormous rooms carved inside the mountain, it has been built to resist a half dozen direct nuclear hits, one after the other in a direct hole. It's very disquieting that the Russians are doing this when they don't have $200 million to build the service module on the international space station, and can't pay housing for their own military people," —Rep. Bartlett.

The Russians have constructed two entire cities over the site, known as Beloretsk 15 & 16, which are closed to the public, each with 30,000 workers. No foreigner has ever set foot near the site. A U.S. military attache stationed in Moscow was turned back when he attempted to visit the region a few years ago.

Neither the Central Intelligence Agency nor the Defense Intelligence Agency will comment on what the Russians are doing at Yamantau Mountain.

"There's not a lot we could say without venturing into the classified realm," CIA spokesman Mike Mansfield said. "It's hard to discuss it with any specificity."

In a U.S. satellite photograph of the Yamantau Mountain that was taken on Oct. 16, 1997, clearly recognizable signs of excavation can be seen at the areas marked Yamantau Mountain and Mezhgorye. The two aboveground support cities, each housing 30,000 workers, located at Beloretsk and Tirlyanskiy can also be seen.

The very little that is known publicly about the site comes from Soviet-era intelligence officers, who defected to Great Britain and the United States. In public testimony before a House Armed Services Subcommittee last October, KGB defector Col. Oleg Gordievsky said the KGB had maintained a separate, top-secret organization, known as Directorate 15, to build and maintain a network of underground command bunkers for the Soviet leadership - including the vast site beneath Yamantau Mountain.

"And what is interesting was that President Yeltsin and Russia's new democratic leaders are using those facilities, and the same service is still running the same facility, like it was 10, 15 years ago." — Col. Oleg Gordievsky

Yamantau Mountain is so secret that only a handful of Russian government officials know about it, says Rep. Curt Weldon, R-Pa., who speaks Russian and travels frequently to Russia, chairing a congressional working group that discusses strategic issues with counterparts from the Russian Duma.

"I ask the Russians about it every time I meet with them... We've never had a straight answer."

Weldon got interested in Yamantau Mountain in 1995 when he saw a public report suggesting it was a vast mining project.

"I went to Moscow and spoke with the deputy interior minister who was in charge of mining," Weldon says. "I asked him if there was any mining activity there. He just shook his head and said he had never heard of it. So I mentioned the other name the Russians use for it: Mezhgorye. He said he hadn't heard of that either. Then he sent an aide out to check. Twenty minutes later, the aide came back, visibly shaken. He said they couldn't say anything about it."

Weldon also met with Andrei Kokoshkin, a former deputy defense minister, in charge of President Yeltsin's National Security Council.

"Kokoshkin called it a public works project, and said there was nothing to worry about, since the Defense Ministry had no involvement in it. So I brought out a copy of the Defense Ministry's budget — it's only a few pages long — and showed him the line item for Mezhgorye. He smiled and said it must be for bridges, roads and schools. When I then asked if I could see it, he said that could only be arranged through Yeltsin. The site was controlled directly by the president." Weldon then tried sending a 3-page letter to Yeltsin in Russian.

"I told him all the things I was trying to do to foster better U.S.-Russia understanding, but said that I couldn't help if they couldn't clear up something as important as this. He never replied."

The cause for concern among many in the US is that the US is currently sending hundreds of millions of dollars to Russia, supposedly to help that country dismantle old nuclear weapons. Meanwhile, the Russian parliament has been complaining that it cannot pay $250 million in back wages owed to its workers at the same time that it is spending money to comply with new strategic arms reduction treaties.

The following is an excerpt from an interview between Chris Ruddy and Col. Stanislav Lunev, a Russian military intelligence officer who defected in 1992. Col. Stanislav Lunev is the highest-ranking military intelligence officer ever to have defected from Russia.

"You ask about Yamantau Mountain. Well, this is a huge underground city, which could be used in time when many Russian cities are destroyed, but the military and political elite will survive and live until our planet will try to restore itself."

"Until our planet will try to restore itself." Think about those words and don't let them leave your thoughts!

And finally, no discussion of underground bases would be complete without mentioning Iraq. The reason is because after the United States and Russia, Iraq has the largest known, and suspected, underground base structure in the world. Not only this, but the countries of Iraq, Iran, and Turkey hold the largest amount of known ancient underground cities in the world.

According to military sources, the Pentagon picked northern Iraq as its first ground target for good reason. Intelligence information showed that Saddam and his immediate circle of Baath party leaders had already moved their offices and families to an underground city near the northern oil city of Kirkuk. It is located between the three cities of Tepe Zardic north of Kirkuk, Taq south of Koi Sanjaq, and Chwarta north of Sulmeniyeh. Several intelligence reports place the secret city on the banks of the Lesser Zab River, protected from the east -- the border with Iran -- by the Dukan Dam and Iraq's largest artificial lake.

Though many have heard about the vast number of underground bases and bunkers located throughout Iraq, less has been publicized about Iraq's huge investment in underground cities. For over 20 years and at a cost estimated to be in the billions of dollars, Saddam scoured Iraq for ancient underground cities for the purpose of expanding and provisioning them.

From this past year we heard news out of Turkey about another discovery of an ancient underground city:

Anadolu Agency: 4/19/2003

KONYA - An underground city was found near Yesilyur hamlet in Karapinar town of central Konya province. Sources told A.A correspondent on Saturday that excavations had not been launched in the underground city yet. The sources said that the underground city was found by the villagers. A big underground city was found near Oymali and Akoren villager in Karapinar town three years ago and archeological work had been launched. Experts had seen that those underground cities were similar to those in Cappadocia. It is thought that this second underground city found in Yesilyurt is linked with the Oymali-Akoren underground city.

Also from Iran we hear:

The underground cities of Cappadocia are worthy of a visit. Let's take Derinkuyu for example. The one time home of up to 20,000 people, its 18 stories descend into the Anatolian plateau 50 kms south of Goreme. Stop and think about that for a while. A large, market town sized community digging a settlement out to guarantee themselves a degree of protection.

There are 8 floors of tunnels open to the visitor and this is enough to give you an idea of the sensation of living in a labyrinth like this. The ventilation shafts, circular and descending from the surface to the lower levels, bring home the scale of the enterprise while the massive circular doors -which were rolled across the passages and sealed from the inside - remind you of the motivation for moving underground in the first place.

Derinkuyu is by no means the only such city you can visit here. There are actually 40 or so subterranean settlements in the area although only a few are open to the public. Kaymakli, 10 kilometers to the north of Derinkuyu, is smaller and less excavated but 5 levels are accessible and the experience is pretty much the same.

Far from being a war to unseat a dictator, or for oil, the present Iraqi war is about the United States possessing the largest number of underground bases in the world. And in a world about to suffer catastrophic events not seen in thousands of years, only those countries able to survive underground have any chance at surviving at all.

No Room for Me?

Now at this point in my story I'd like to remind you of something important. Whether or not you believe in any great disaster befalling us, and thereby affecting you and your family, doesn't take away from the fact that your own government, and other governments, are planning like mad to survive 'something'.

At the same time they are spending billions on underground bases and stockpiling them, you are being told that there is nothing to worry about.

But at the exact same time that they are telling you everything is fine, they are increasingly releasing tidbits of information that fuels the fires of doom and gloom. What neither they nor we can ignore however, are the many and ever increasing changes in our weather that have been occurring. All they can do is to do their best to keep the information hidden from the masses; all we can do is to continually keep finding the information they're suppressing.

It's quite the game of cat and mouse too! But like the mouse the losers of this game will be dead.

Let me give you an example of how this works:

January 14, 2004 a large comet hits the sun. A few minutes' later volcanoes in Russia, Japan and Ecuador erupt. On the nightly news programs no mention is made of either the comet hitting the sun or the volcanic eruptions. During the following 3 days there are exactly 5 stories that can be found on the Internet relating to the volcanoes, none on the comet hitting the sun.

Now, were these newsworthy stories? Was there a cause and effect happening between the sun being hit by a comet and volcanoes erupting on earth? Well, the answers aren't going to be found in the popular press or in our universities but there are many scientists 'out there' that are now and have been sounding the alarm.

And my point is this; though information is being suppressed it is by no means being totally shut off by the government. Quite the opposite in fact has been happening.

The strategy that the government has chosen is to: 1.) Insure that the brightest minds will be protected in underground facilities. 2.) Insure that the military power of the United States is able to withstand a worldwide disaster by spreading troops and equipment throughout the world. 3.) Insure that the economic power of the United States survives. 4.) Insure that just enough information is released to the general populace so that those who are able and willing to do so can prepare.

If anyone is willing to find fault with the government in how they have gone about achieving these goals in the past 30 plus years I'd defy them to come up with a better plan. After all, the very first thing we'd want them to do, is the very last thing we'd do if we were making the decisions, and that is telling everyone the whole truth.

Now imagine this for a moment, you know the truth, you know that we are heading for a worldwide disaster of Biblical proportions, and you get on television and announce it to the world. What is going to happen?

Of course the answer is just plain chaos. So what would the truth accomplish with the end effect being a total shutdown of basic human services, including emergency services and transportation of food. How many people the world over would continue going to work? How many maniacs seeing the opportunity to rape and pillage would no longer have the fear of long prison sentences hanging over their heads? How many 'have nots' would begin attacking the 'haves'?

This is of course a plan filled with potentially more devastating effects than in not knowing the truth in the first place isn't it?

So the bottom line to this is simple, as there wasn't room in the inn for Jesus when he was born, there isn't going to be any room for us when disaster strikes. We're on our own!

Perspective, Use It or Lose It!

We are the most conditioned, programmed beings the world has ever known. Not only are our thoughts and attitudes continually being shaped and molded; our very awareness of the whole design seems like it is being subtly and inexorably erased.

The doors of our perception are carefully and precisely regulated. Who cares, right?

It is an exhausting and endless task to keep explaining to people how most issues of conventional wisdom are scientifically implanted in the public consciousness by a thousand media clips per day. In an effort to save time, I would like to provide just a little background on the handling of information in this country.

Once the basic principles are illustrated about how our current system of media control arose historically, you might be more apt to question any given story in today's news.

If everybody believes something, it's probably wrong. We call that Conventional Wisdom. In America, conventional wisdom that has mass acceptance is usually contrived: somebody paid for it. Examples:

Pharmaceuticals restore health

Vaccination brings immunity

The cure for cancer is just around the corner

When a child is sick, she needs immediate antibiotics

When a child has a fever he needs Tylenol

Hospitals are safe and clean.

America has the best health care in the world.

And many, many more!

This is a list of illusions that have cost billions and billions to conjure up. Did you ever wonder why you never see the President speaking publicly unless he is reading? Or why most people in this country think generally the same about most of the above issues? Well, let's look at how this set-up got started in the first place.

In a book titled, "Trust Us We're Experts", Stauber and Rampton pull together some compelling data describing the science of creating public opinion in America.

They trace modern public influence back to the early part of the last century, highlighting the work of guys like Edward L. Bernays, the Father of Spin. From his own amazing chronicle Propaganda, we learn how Edward L. Bernays took the ideas of his famous uncle Sigmund Freud himself, and applied them to the emerging science of mass persuasion.

The only difference was that instead of using these principles to uncover hidden themes in the human unconscious, the way Freudian psychology does, Bernays used these same ideas to mask agendas and to create illusions that deceive and misrepresent, for marketing purposes.

Bernays dominated the PR industry until the 1940s, and was a significant force for another 40 years after that. During all that time, Bernays took on hundreds of diverse assignments to create a public perception about some idea or product. A few examples:

As a neophyte with the Committee on Public Information, one of Bernays' first assignments was to help sell the First World War to the American public with the idea to "Make the World Safe for Democracy."

A few years later, Bernays set up a stunt to popularize the notion of women smoking cigarettes. In organizing the 1929 Easter Parade in New York City, Bernays showed himself as a force to be reckoned with.

He organized the Torches of Liberty Brigade in which suffragettes marched in the parade smoking cigarettes as a mark of women's liberation. Such publicity followed from that one event that from then on women have felt secure about destroying their own lungs in public, the same way that men have always done.

Bernays also popularized the idea of bacon for breakfast.

Not one to turn down a challenge, he set up the advertising format along with the AMA that lasted for nearly 50 years proving that cigarettes are beneficial to health. Just look at ads in issues of Life or Time from the 40s and 50s.

Bernay's job was to reframe an issue; to create a desired image that would put a particular product or concept in a desirable light. Bernays described the public as a 'herd that needed to be led.' And this herdlike thinking makes people "susceptible to leadership."

Bernays never deviated from his fundamental axiom to "control the masses without their knowing it." The best PR happens with the people unaware that they are being manipulated.

Stauber describes Bernays' rationale like this: "the scientific manipulation of public opinion was necessary to overcome chaos and conflict in a democratic society."

These early mass persuaders postured themselves as performing a moral service for humanity in general - democracy was too good for people; they needed to be told what to think, because they were incapable of rational thought by themselves. Here's a paragraph from Bernays' Propaganda:

"Those who manipulate the unseen mechanism of society constitute an invisible government which is the true ruling power of our country. We are governed, our minds molded, our tastes formed, our ideas suggested largely by men we have never heard of.

This is a logical result of the way in which our democratic society is organized. Vast numbers of human beings must cooperate in this manner if they are to live together as a smoothly functioning society.

In almost every act of our lives whether in the sphere of politics or business in our social conduct or our ethical thinking, we are dominated by the relatively small number of persons who understand the mental processes and social patterns of the masses. It is they who pull the wires that control the public mind."

Once the possibilities of applying Freudian psychology to mass media were glimpsed, Bernays soon had more corporate clients than he could handle. Global corporations fell all over themselves courting the new Image-Makers. There were dozens of goods and services and ideas to be sold to a susceptible public. Over the years, these players have had the money to make their images happen. A few examples:

Philip Morris Pfizer Union Carbide
Allstate Monsanto Eli Lilly
Tobacco industry Ciba Geigy lead industry
Coors DuPont Clorox
Shell Oil Standard Oil Procter & Gamble
Boeing General Motors Dow Chemical
General Mills Goodyear

Though world-famous within the PR industry, the companies have names we don't know, and for good reason.

The best PR goes unnoticed.

For decades they have created the opinions that most of us were raised with, on virtually any issue which has the remotest commercial value, including:

Pharmaceutical drugs vaccines

Medicine as a profession alternative medicine

Fluoridation of city water chlorine

Household cleaning products tobacco

Dioxin global warming

Leaded gasoline cancer research and treatment

Pollution of the oceans forests and lumber

Images of celebrities, including damage control crisis and disaster management

Genetically modified foods aspartame

Food additives; processed foods dental amalgams

Lesson #1

Bernays learned early on that the most effective way to create credibility for a product or an image was by "independent third-party" endorsement.

For example, if General Motors were to come out and say that global warming is a hoax thought up by some liberal tree-huggers, people would suspect GM's motives, since selling automobiles makes GM's fortune.

If however some independent research institute with a very credible sounding name like the Global Climate Coalition comes out with a scientific report that says global warming is really a fiction, people begin to get confused and to have doubts about the original issue.

So that's exactly what Bernays did. With a policy inspired by genius, he set up "more institutes and foundations than Rockefeller and Carnegie combined."

Quietly financed by the industries, whose products were being evaluated, these "independent" research agencies would chum out "scientific" studies and press materials that could create any image their handlers wanted. Such front groups are given high-sounding names like:

Temperature Research Foundation Manhattan Institute

International Food Information Council Center for Produce Quality

Consumer Alert Tobacco Institute Research Council
The Advancement of Sound Science Coalition Cato Institute
Air Hygiene Foundation American Council on Science and Health Industrial Health Federation Global Climate Coalition International Food Information Council Alliance for Better Foods

Sound pretty legit don't they?

As Stauber explains, these organizations and hundreds of others like them are front groups whose sole mission is to advance the image of the global corporations who fund them, like those listed before.

This is accomplished in part by an endless stream of 'press releases' announcing "breakthrough" research to every radio station and newspaper in the country. Many of these canned reports read like straight news, and indeed are purposely molded in the news format.

This saves journalists the trouble of researching the subjects on their own, especially on topics about which they know very little. Entire sections of the release or in the case of video news releases, the whole thing can be just lifted intact, with no editing, given the byline of the reporter or newspaper or TV station - and voila! Instant news - copy and paste. Written by corporate PR firms.

Does this really happen? Every single day, since the 1920s when the idea of the News Release was first invented by Ivy Lee. Sometimes as many as half the stories appearing in an issue of the Wall St. Journal are based solely on such PR press releases.

These types of stories are mixed right in with legitimately researched stories. Unless you have done the research yourself, you won't be able to tell the difference.

As 1920s spin pioneers like Ivy Lee and Edward Bemays gained more experience, they began to formulate rules and guidelines for creating public opinion. They learned quickly that mob psychology must focus on emotion, not facts. Since the mob is incapable of rational thought, motivation must be based not on logic but on presentation. Here are some of the axioms of the new science of PR:

Technology is a religion unto itself

If people are incapable of rational thought, real democracy is dangerous

Important decisions should be left to experts

When reframing issues, stay away from substance; create images

Never state a clearly demonstrable lie

Words are very carefully chosen for their emotional impact. Here's an example. A front group called the International Food Information Council handles the public's natural aversion to genetically modified foods.

Trigger words are repeated all through the text. Now in the case of GM foods, the public is instinctively afraid of these experimental new creations which have suddenly popped up on our grocery shelves which are said to have DNA alterations. The IFIC wants to reassure the public of the safety of GM foods, so it avoids words like:

Frankenfoods Hitler biotech

Chemical DNA experiments

Manipulate money safety

Scientists radiation roulette

Gene-splicing gene gun random

Instead, good PR for GM foods contains words like:

hybrids natural order beauty

choice bounty cross-breeding diversity earth farmer organic wholesome

It's basic Freudian/Tony Robbins word association. The fact that GM foods are not hybrids that have been subjected to the slow and careful scientific methods of real crossbreeding doesn't really matter. This is pseudoscience, not science. Form is everything and substance just a passing myth.

Who do you think funds the International Food Information Council? Take a wild guess. Right - Monsanto, DuPont, Frito-Lay, Coca-Cola, Nutrasweet - those in a position to make fortunes from GM foods.

As the science of mass control evolved, PR firms developed further guidelines for effective copy. Here are some of the gems:

Dehumanize the attacked party by labeling and name-calling

Speak in glittering generalities using emotionally positive words

When covering something up, don't use plain English; stall for time; distract

Get endorsements from celebrities, churches, sports figures, street people - anyone who has no expertise in the subject at hand

The 'plain folks' ruse: us billionaires are just like you.

When minimizing outrage, don't say anything memorable, point out the benefits of what just happened, and avoid moral issues

Keep this list. Start watching for these techniques. Not hard to find - look at today's paper or tonight's TV news. See what they're doing; these guys are good!

PR firms have become very sophisticated in the preparation of news releases. They have learned how to attach the names of famous scientists to research that those scientists have not even looked at.

This is a common occurrence. In this way the editors of newspapers and TV news shows are often not even aware that an individual release is a total PR fabrication. Or at least they have "deniability," right?

Stauber tells the amazing story of how leaded gas came into the picture. In 1922, General Motors discovered that adding lead to gasoline gave cars more horsepower.

When there was some concern about safety, GM paid the Bureau of Mines to do some fake "testing" and publish spurious research that 'proved' that inhalation of lead was harmless. Enter Charles Kettering.

Founder of the world famous Sloan-Kettering Memorial Institute for medical research, Charles Kettering also happened to be an executive with General Motors.

By some strange coincidence, we soon have the Sloan Kettering institute issuing reports stating that lead occurs naturally in the body and that the body has a way of eliminating low level exposure.

Through its association with The Industrial Hygiene Foundation and PR giant Hill & Knowlton, Sloane Kettering opposed all anti-lead research for years. Without organized scientific opposition, for the next 60 years more and more gasoline became leaded, until by the 1970s, 90 of our gasoline was leaded.

Finally it became too obvious to hide that lead was a major carcinogen, and leaded gas was phased out in the late 1980s. But during those 60 years, it is estimated that some 30 million tons of lead were released in vapor form onto American streets and highways. 30 million tons! That is PR, my friends.

In 1993 a guy named Peter Huber wrote a new book and coined a new term. The book was Galileo's Revenge and the term was junk science. Huber's shallow thesis was that real science supports technology, industry, and progress.

Anything else was suddenly junk science. Not surprisingly, Stauber explains how Huber's book was supported by the industry-backed Manhattan Institute.

Huber's book was generally dismissed not only because it was so poorly written, but because it failed to realize one fact: true scientific research begins with no conclusions. Real scientists are seeking the truth because they do not yet know what the truth is.

True scientific method goes like this:

1. Form a hypothesis
2. Make predictions for that hypothesis
3. Test the predictions
4. Reject or revise the hypothesis based on the research findings

Boston University scientist Dr. David Ozonoff explains that ideas in science are themselves like "living organisms that must be nourished, supported, and cultivated with resources for making them grow and flourish."

Great ideas that don't get this financial support because the commercial angles are not immediately obvious - these ideas wither and die.

Another way you can often distinguish real science from phony is that real science points out flaws in its own research. Phony science pretends there were no flaws.

Contrast this with modern PR and its constant pretensions to sound science. Corporate sponsored research, whether it's in the area of drugs, GM foods, or chemistry begins with predetermined conclusions.

It is the job of the scientists then to prove that these conclusions are true, because of the economic upside that proof will bring to the industries paying for that research. This invidious approach to science has shifted the entire focus of research in America during the past 50 years, as any true scientist is likely to admit.

Stauber documents the increasing amount of corporate sponsorship of university research. This has nothing to do with the pursuit of knowledge. Scientists lament that research has become just another commodity, something bought and sold.

It is shocking when Stauber shows how the vast majority of corporate PR today opposes any research that seeks to protect public health or the environment.

It's a funny thing that most of the time when we see the phrase "junk science," it is in a context of defending something that may threaten either the environment or our health.

This makes sense when one realizes that money changes hands only by selling the illusion of health and the illusion of environmental protection. True public health and real preservation of the earth's environment have very low market value.

Stauber thinks it ironic that industry's self-proclaimed debunkers of junk science are usually non-scientists themselves. Here again they can do this because the issue is not science, but the creation of images.

When PR firms attack legitimate environmental groups and alternative medicine people, they again use special words that will carry an emotional punch:

Outraged sound science junk science sensible
Scare mongering responsible phobia
Hoax alarmist hysteria

The next time you are reading a newspaper article about an environmental or health issue, note how the author shows bias by using the above terms. This is the result of very specialized training.

Another standard PR tactic is to use the rhetoric of the environmentalists themselves to defend a dangerous and untested product that poses an actual threat to the environment. This we see constantly in the PR smokescreen that surrounds genetically modified foods.

They talk about how GM foods are necessary to grow more food and to end world hunger, when the reality is that GM foods actually have lower yields per acre than natural crops.

The grand design sort of comes into focus once you realize that almost all GM foods have been created by the sellers of herbicides and pesticides so that those plants can withstand greater amounts of herbicides and pesticides.

Now I hope this chapter has given you a hint to start reading newspaper and magazine articles a little differently, and perhaps start watching TV news shows with a slightly different attitude than you had before.

Always ask, what are they selling here, and who's selling it? And if you actually follow up on Stauber & Rampton's book you might even glimpse the possibility of advancing your life one quantum simply by ceasing to subject your brain to mass media.

That's right - no more newspapers, no more TV news, no more Time magazine or Newsweek. You could actually do that. Just think what you could do with the extra time alone.

Really feel like you need to "relax" or find out "what's going on in the world" for a few hours every day? Think about the news of the past couple of years for a minute.

Do you really suppose the major stories that have dominated headlines and TV news have been "what is going on in the world?" Do you actually think there's been nothing going on besides the contrived tech slump, the contrived power shortages, the re-filtered accounts of foreign violence and disaster, and all the other non-stories that the puppeteers dangle before us every day?

What about when they get a big one, like with 911 or Monica Lewinsky or the Oklahoma City bombing? Do we really need to know all that detail, day after day? Do we have any way of verifying all that detail, even if we wanted to? What is the purpose of news?

To inform the public? Hardly! The sole purpose of news is to keep the public in a state of fear and uncertainty so that they'll watch again tomorrow and be subjected to the same advertising.

Oversimplification? Of course. That's the mark of mass media mastery - simplicity. The invisible hand. Like Edward Bernays said, the people must be controlled without them knowing it.

Consider this: what was really going on in the world all that time they were distracting us with all that stupid vexatious daily smokescreen? Fear and uncertainty - that's what keeps people coming back for more.

If this seems like a radical outlook, let's take it one step further:

What would you lose from your life if you stopped watching TV and stopped reading newspapers altogether?

Would your life really suffer any financial, moral, intellectual or academic loss from such a decision?

Do you really need to have your family continually absorbing the illiterate, amoral, phony, uncultivated, desperately brainless values of the people featured in the average nightly TV program? Are these fake, programmed robots "normal"?

Do you need to have your life values constantly spoon-fed to you?

Are those shows really amusing, or just a necessary distraction to keep you from looking at reality, or trying to figure things out yourself by doing a little independent reading?

Name one example of how your life is improved by watching TV news and reading the evening paper!

There's no question that as a nation, we're getting dumber year by year. Ever notice the blatant grammar mistakes so ubiquitous in today's advertising and billboards?

Literacy is marginal in most American secondary schools. Three fourths of California high school seniors can't read well enough to pass their exit exams. But it also doesn't stop the schools from giving them diplomas.

If you think other parts of the country are smarter, try this one: hand any high school senior a book by Dumas or Jane Austen, and ask them to open to any random page and just read one paragraph out loud. Go ahead, do it. SAT scales are arbitrarily shifted lower and lower to disguise how dumb kids are getting year by year.

At least 10 have documented "learning disabilities," which are reinforced and rewarded by special treatment and special drugs. Ever hear of anyone failing a grade any more?

Or observe the intellectual level of the average movie which these days may only last one or two weeks in the theatres, especially if it has insufficient explosions, chase scenes, silicone, fake martial arts, and cretinesque dialogue.

Radio? Consider the low mental qualifications of the falsely animated corporate simians they hire as DJs - they're only allowed to have 50 thoughts, which they just repeat at random.

And at what point did popular music cease to require the study of any musical instrument or theory whatsoever, not to mention lyric? Perhaps we just don't understand this emerging art form, right? The Darwinism of MTV - apes descended from man.

Ever notice how most articles in any of the glossy magazines sound like they were all written by the same guy? And this guy just graduated from junior college? And yet he has all the correct opinions on social issues, no original ideas, and that shallow, smug homogenized corporate omniscience, which enables him to assure us that everything is going to be fine...

All this is great news for the PR industry - makes their job that much easier. Not only are very few paying attention to the process of conditioning; fewer are capable of understanding it even if somebody explained it to them.

Let's say you're in a crowded cafeteria, and you buy a cup of tea. And as you're about to sit down you see your friend way across the room. So you put the tea down and walk across the room and talk to your friend for a few minutes.

Now, coming back to your tea, are you just going to pick it up and drink it? Remember, this is a crowded place and you've just left your tea unattended for several minutes. You've given anybody in that room access to your tea.

Why should your mind be any different? Turning on the TV, or uncritically absorbing mass publications every day - these activities allow access to our minds by "just anyone" - anyone who has an agenda, anyone with the resources to create a public image via popular media.

As we've seen above, just because we read something or see something on TV doesn't mean it's true or worth knowing. So the idea here is, like the tea, the mind is also worth guarding, worth limiting access to it.

This is the only life we get. Time is our total capital. Why waste it allowing our potential, our personality, our values to be shaped, crafted, and limited according to the whims of the mass panderers?

There are many important issues that are crucial to our physical, mental, and spiritual well being. If it's an issue where money is involved, objective data won't be so easy to obtain. Remember, if everybody knows something, that image has been bought and paid for.

Real knowledge takes a little effort, a little excavation down at least one level below what "everybody knows".

And that is where we are at now my dear friends, the level below what everybody else knows.

You've made a great beginning too, in getting where you are now, I mean just look at the obstacles you have had to overcome in order to just begin to find the truth about anything these days!

When you first opened this book I told you I was going to tell you a story, and that's what I've done to the best of my ability. But in listening to my story you've also put yourself on another path, one less, way less, traveled by your fellow human beings. The information I've put in my story are all true facts, but less known than maybe those you've been used to hearing. Most people can't or won't believe facts anymore unless they've heard them from the popular newspapers, radio, or television outlets utilized for indoctrinating the masses. And that's pretty sad isn't it?

This isn't you though, is it? You are searching for the truth. And I can tell you with 100% certainty that if you keep searching not only will you find the truth, it will find you too!

There isn't a lot of time left my dear friends but as long as we do have together I'll continue to do my best to tell you the truth and by the time we're finished, we'll be survivors in a much better world than the one we find ourselves in now.

And They Lived Happily Ever After.

The End.

Dave's website is www.whatdoesitmean.com. So, what do Dave's visions mean? He makes a good case for a soon to come world-wide catastrophe and the secret government preparations which have, been secretly made to with it.

But, I'm a pragmatist, so my question is simple: what all this mean to me? I can't do anything about the Bush dynasty or the Anunnaki, but if the danger Dave has envisioned is real, there's a lot I can do to help people survive.

So, how real is the danger? Let's look at the evidence.

First, Dave's 1979 ten precognitive visions were proven correct. Thus, his second set of visions, last year, have to be considered seriously. Okay, what other evidence have we? Well, we have the hysteria Nancy Lieder last year with her www.zetatalk.com predictions of Planet-X swishing past the Earth on its 3630 year sweep through our solar system. She got a lot of radio exposure with her information relayed from the Zeta Reticulans. Planet X was supposed to be a brown dwarf companion of our Sun, which, orbits through our solar system and regularly cleans our clocks. Think Atlantis. When her May 15, 2003 uneventfully we relaxed.

Next, Mark Hazelwood and his book, Blindsided- Planet-X Passes in 2003 - Earthchanges! Mark does an excellent job of tying known historical catastrophes to the regular visit of X.- like the sudden appearance of the Great Lakes about 3600 years ago. Mark has clearly done his home-work. I had trouble finding the book so I got a bunch from the publisher. It's #94 in my catalog and sells for $15, After reading Mark's book, and one by Jim McCanney, Dave's visions didn't come as all that much of a surprise.

Jim's book is Planet-X, Comets & Earth Changes. Jim is a well-respected scientist, even if at odds with the hierarchy at NASA over the significant affect passing comets have on the Earth. The rift was made much worse every time Jim used the passing of comets to predict earthquakes and volcano eruptions — and was right on the money. His book is #95 in my catalog, $18. My own copy is highlighted on almost every page.

Jim's theories tell us that one of the manifestations that a large body entering our solar system would be the heating up of the planets and the Sun. Well, d'uh, NASA has reported (hat Pluto has recently warmed up and so has Mars, with its ice caps starting to melt And we have the Sun with massive solar flares and acting up as never before seen in recorded history.

Hmm, what was that about global warming? Could that be from car exhaust and power plants making electricity, or Planet-X upsetting the solar system's balance? Screw those Kyoto Protocols the politicians are waving at us and start digging a refuge somewhere in the mountains for your family.

We're having a record number of volcanoes and earthquakes. Car exhaust isn't causing them. Maybe it's like Jim says, the disturbance of the electrical balance of the solar system. A recent survey of one area of the Pacific Ocean showed over 3,000 new undersea volcanoes. No wonder the Antarctic Ross Ice Shelf is melting and calving.

Oh, have you been following Yellowstone heating up? I understand it's been closed to visitors. Say, isn't that about where Dave saw the huge explosion from his vantage point in space? Some worry-warts have been telling us that if Yellowstone blows it could take out an area for 600 miles around. Golly, that's the western third of the US. Yoiks! That's where Scallion's map of 21st century America has ocean.

But, if something tha-a-at big is coming, wouldn't our astronomers be screaming bloody murder? Headlines? Extra editions of the National Enquirer?. Several concerned astronomers who've called me say that the world's major telescopes have been "shut down for repairs." The secondary telescopes are not available, once it's admitted where they want to look. Further, I understand that the US and the Vatican have set up observatories in Antarctica. Booth's visions had Planet-X coming from the south pole up past the Earth. And what about those Australian astronomer reports of a new star... which seems to be growing in size?

Well, Dave isn't the only person to get visions of the future.. .what about some others? Ed Dames (Major Doom) is holed up in a cave on Maui. He's recently predicted Planet-X will cause a pole change, with 300 mile-an-hour winds. The highest wind ever recorded on Earth was 261 mph, atop Mt. Washington, here in New Hampshire. I saw what winds half that speed did to New Hampshire during the 1938 hurricane. Every tree in its path was flattened. Whole mountains of trees up through Franconia Notch, with not one left standing.

Gordon Michael Scallion is holed up underground a few miles from my home. He's got food and fuel for a couple of years.

Dave's built an underground refuge for his family right next to his home. It's built out of a group of those big steel shipping containers. Ever practical, he's growing mushrooms in them for his organic food customers.

If you don't know much about the accuracy of Nostradamus' predictions, read Dolores Cannon's Conversations With Nostradamus and come up to speed. The old boy has been remarkably accurate.

So what's he say? Five hundred years ago he predicted that shortly after the millennium there would be a pole shift which would wipe out 97 of humanity. Uh, oh!

Well, we know there have been pole shifts in the past. We've dug mammoths out of the Siberian ice with tropical plants in their stomachs. And we've found huge piles of bones which resulted from a sudden tidal wave killing thousands of animals all at once.

Archeologists have found plenty of evidence for past extinctions. Planet-X, passing by, could easily shift the tectonic plates big time, giving us that pole shift. Nostradamus said the new poles would be over Siberia and South America. Whew, that would put New Hampshire where Florida is today. Wow, where's my scuba gear?

Okay, the evidence all fits the pattern. It sure looks like we're going to have enormous earthquakes, volcanoes, Yellowstone exploding, and a sudden pole shift. That means the mother of all storms, mile-high waves sloshing around the globe, wiping out all coastal cities, and unbelievable winds. We're talking about moving underground or joining the souls in heaven waiting for babies to be born for their reincarnation.

Oh, I almost forget Chet Snow's Mass Dreams of the Future. Chet's group, using hypnosis, progressed about 2500 people to their next lives. Very few were able to reincarnate in the 21st century due to a shortage of babies being born. They traced the problem back to some sort of mass human extinction early in the 21st century. Coincidence? Sure.

So, if we want to survive this mess, what's our best bet? I like Dave's approach, burying steel shipping containers in which to weather the storm. You'll want to have a good supply of food and water. Are there any solar-powered water purifiers? A big supply of strike-anywhere matches. Hand saws, shovels and other non-powered tools. Cots, sleeping bags, a wood stove and wood, plates and utensils... you make the list.

You'll sure be glad you have a silver colloid making kit. Silver is the best antibiotic there is and it's inexpensive to make. Penny a gallon. I have an ac-dc kit available which includes heavy duty pure silver wire, instructions, a small power supply that plugs into the wall while you still have power, and battery backup power for when the power is gone. Silver colloid works like magic on cuts, sores, rashes, colds, flu.. .or to wash germs off food.. .like salmonella and E Coli.

With the roads destroyed and no source of gas, even if some cars survive, we'll want to have mountain bikes for the whole family.

If you're planning to weather the chaos Booth has envisioned you'll be faced with a continuing battle to survive in a world with few doctors and no drugs. One of the last things you need is to be sick, so I'm going to let you in on a secret. This is not a little secret, I think you'll agree that this is one of the biggest secrets in the world. It has to do with why we get sick and how we can get well.. .without any drugs.

The only reason we get sick...and I mean any illness...is because we've poisoned ourselves. Our bodies are a miracle of design, so doesn't it make sense that we'd have a first rate repair department built in? We do, and it's called our immune system. It's there to deal with any damage that we inflict on ourselves.. .cuts, bruises, broken bones, and so on. Also, when we eat, drink, or breathe anything toxic, get poisons on our skin, or are attacked by microbes, viruses, parasites, fungi, or yeast infections, the immune system rushes out the troops to deal with the problem. And, if it isn't overwhelmed by multiple attacks, it can deal with almost anything.

My Secret Guide to Health, goes into detail on the toxins we're unknowingly dumping on our immune systems and thus helping make us sick.

Toxins? Unknowingly? Like what?

Number one is cooked food. Our bodies, over thousands of generations, adapted to the food that was available. Raw food. Raw fruit, not that stuff that's cooked in sugar and put in a can. Raw vegetables, not canned or blanched and then frozen for us to finish the cooking. Raw meat and fish. As soon as you cook any food you kill the enzymes which your I body needs to properly digest it. Your immune system then treats it as toxic, rushing out the white cells to fight it as an alien invader. In today's cooked food world this is helping to keep our immune systems maxed out so they can't fight cancer.

Then there's sugar, a very addictive poison. And poisons such as caffeine (one drop injected into your body will kill you), alcohol, nicotine, aspartame (a.k.a. NutraSweet™), fluorides and chlorine in your tap water, pesticides in your food, mercury in your mouth, vaccinations, and so on. My friends, we're doing a fantastic job of poisoning ourselves with stuff that wasn't around a hundred years ago, and we're paying the price with arthritis, fat, cancer, Alzheimer's, Parkinson's, lost libido, depression, fatigue, multiple sclerosis, diabetes, and so on...everything from acne to zits.

Once you stop poisoning yourself your immune system will be able to get to work and repair the damage you've unknowingly done. You don't need any drugs. Readers of my Secret Guide to Health are calling every day with reports of disappeared cancer, lost excess weight, emphysema-destroyed lungs repaired, etc. The book is catalog #05 and is $20.

With or without Planet-X, it sure pays to be healthy, so read my guide. Once you see what a lifestyle change can do for you you'll be giving copies for your family and friends. Employers will be giving copies to every employee in order to drastically cut their health insurance costs and avoid sick days. SUver Colloid Solution

Silver, is one of the best antibiotics ever discovered. The only serious problem with it is that it is not patentable, so the drug companies can't charge $20 a dose for it. Silver is the only antibiotic that pathogens haven't been able to adapt to. On the plus side, silver colloid.. which is a suspension of micro-scopic particles in pure water, particles so fine that they don't settle out.. is easy to make on the kitchen table.

I got fed up with so-called health stores charging $25 for a small bottle of silver colloid, so I've a kit which includes a small power supply you plug into the wall, two heavy duty pieces of silver wire, instructions, and a reprint of an article on the subject. There is also a battery clip kit so you can still make it when the power goes off. A few minutes after opening the box you'll have made enough silver colloid to protect you and your family from colds, flu, rashes... and to rinse any food in that might have E-coli or salmonella, or any other germs. The kit is #82A in my catalog and costs $40 complete. Other Stuff

Just in case America doesn't manage to get wiped out this year, I have some other books you'll want to read.

My Secret Guide to Wealth ($5 - book #03) explains how just about anyone can make all the money they want and have the freedom this provides. The "secret" is simple.. own your own business. My book explains how you can get someone else to pay you to learn everything you need to know to do this.

Survivors are going to have to grow food. My book #86 ($3) explains twelve ways to grow bigger, better crops. We can grow ten times as much on the same land when we know how. And, with about a tenth the water we're currently using.

My Secret Guide to Wisdom is a review of about a hundred books you're crazy if you don't read. These books will open your eyes to the endless lies we're being told.. .and the media cover-ups. Out of the millions of books that have been published there are just a few that are really important for you to read. My Preparations

First, I'm living on a 200-acre New Hampshire farm. My place is at 1,000 feet altitude, so even if the oceans rise a couple hundred feet I won't get my feet wet. We're busy right now converting the cellar into a storm-proof haven. I have two emergency generators, a deep well, a 700-gallon water tank, and a composting toilet. There are several natural springs within easy walking distance, and a 15-acre pond to provide fish and frogs. Your Survival

If you're in a city when IT happens, you and your family are toast. I suggest you head for the mountains and look for a place you can build an underground refuge. You can go the David Booth family route, burying steel shipping containers, and making an apartment out of them. Mine cost about $ 1,000 each.

Another approach would be to buy an old beat-up mobile home and bury it, with the ground around it beamed for protection. In that way you'll have a complete apartment all built in.

Underground homes are relatively inexpensive to build and they don't need much energy for heat in the winter or cooling in the summer. You want to run an air intake pipe a couple hundred feet about six feet down, where the ground temperature is constant year around. There are some excellent books on building underground homes. I recommend Stu Campbell's The Underground House Book. This is an 8-1/2 x 11 inch, 200-page $11 book. Garden Way Publishing, Charlotte VT 05445 and ISBN 0-88266-188-3.

Then there's Mike Oehler's The $50 & Up Underground House Book. It's $17, Route 4, Box 618, Bonners Ferry ID 83805, ISBN 0-442-27311-8. David Carter's Build It Underground, $8, 208-pages, Sterling Publishing, 2 Park Avenue, NYC 10016. Malcolm Wells has a wonderful book, An Architect's Sketchbook of Underground Buildings, $15,200" pages 8-1/2 x 11-inches, 673 Satucket Road, Brewster MA 02631 (508) 896-6850, ISBN 0-9621878-1-X.

You'll want protection from super high winds, plenty of water, food, clean air, and a ham radio all-band transceiver powered by a bicycle-mounted 12-volt generator. You'll want lots of seeds. Make those the heirloom type, please.

You'll want a solar-powered system if you're going to have any electricity later on. Banks of solar cells, industrial batteries, and a converter to give you 120V AC. And lay in some spare parts to keep it going.

If you can get a local group to prepare for survival, you'll have an even better chance. If Nostradamus and Booth are right, it's going to be a long time before any civilization infrastructure is rebuilt. Roads, fuel, power, and so on could take years to centuries to rebuild. If past pole shifts are any kind of a guide, the old boy wasn't exaggerating.

We're not going to have a big need for politicians, lawyers, bankers, stock analysts, airline pilots, and so on for a long time. Maybe hundreds of years. We're going to need savvy farmers. Maybe it's time to invest in gardening books.

I remember Art Bell one night interviewing someone who claimed to be a time traveler from the far future. He claimed that a 21st century pole shift put us back to the caveman days for hundreds of years.

How Come?

How come you haven't been reading about Planet-X in the newspapers and seeing it on the TV news? The same reason you've never heard the truth about Flight 800 (unless you read "Into The Buzzsaw"). And why you haven't seen any headlines about the UFO crash at Roswell or the alien they captured there. Or the salvaged UFOs at Area 51 in Nevada, or the success of cold fusion, Or why we get sick and how we can cure ourselves of any illness (including cancer) with no drugs - the fluoridation scam - the danger of vaccinations (particularly for babies) - root canals - nearby power lines - electric blankets - the real story of Pearl Harbor - Aspartame in diet colas causing multiple sclerosis - milk being dangerous to drink -hamburgers being dangerous to eat - sugar being an addictive poison -coffee ditto - medications such as Prozac, Ritalin, Zoloft, Paxil, etc., causing mania - that the use of baby formula instead of breast feeding causes brain damage, reducing a baby's IQ by about 10 points (the difference between high school and college - chemtrails - the Apollo Moon missions all being faked - there having been four bombs at Oklahoma City - the space shuttle never having proved any value - the space station never providing anything of scientific value - cell phones frying brains, causing memory loss and brain tumors - genetically modified foods not being safe to eat - precognition being scientifically validated - hot fusion never having any potential as an energy source - sonograms being harmful to babies - the Sun not causing skin cancer - global warming not being caused by man - a college education being unimportant for success - ten year olds easily learning to speed read at 20,000 words per minute - the dangers of mad cow and West Nile diseases being insignificant - death certificate lies covering up fatal doctor and hospital errors. These are the sorts of things I write about in my essays. You'll find I've done my homework.

Planet-X is going to have to loom in our sky before the media will admit it's there. And, with the official secrecy lid on, it's your guess as to how they will try to explain what we can all plainly see.

I wish that David's visions didn't fit in with so many other recent events, and that his history of the world's major players didn't fit into the pattern we're seeing. The Pollyana in me wants to ignore the whole mess and carry on with my life, ignoring his visions. More than any other single person I've helped us have cell phones and personal computers. My hope has been to lead the world into a wellness revolution. An educational revolution would be next. Hey, why think small? If the major players haven't finished me off by then, how about an energy revolution? Cold fusion can supply all the energy we need at less than a tenth the cost of oil and coal, with no pollution products.
